PREFACE.

WHO'S WHO IN PENNSYLVANIA is a work based on the principle of a London publication which gives sketches of the lives of people of prominence in Great Britain and to some extent in other countries. There are numerous men whose careers have a definite and important interest when considered as factors in the life of their special States, and whose reputation, while not national or world-wide, is such as to entitle them to consideration in such work.

Recognizing the fact that this commonwealth information, if we may so designate it, is not to be found complete within any one volume, and that those who seek for it often find it impossible to secure, the publishers of this work have here endeavored to supply it for the State of Pennsylvania. They are not tyros in this work. Their well known companion volume, WHO'S WHO IN NEW YORK, has been widely and warmly welcomed in the Empire State. In the present volume they have endeavored to supply the people of Pennsylvania with similar information concerning its notable and eminent men, its jurists, lawyers, legislators, physicians, authors, financiers, merchants, inventors, and in short all who are taking part in the development, public and industrial, of the second State in wealth and population of the American Union.

WHO'S WHO IN PENNSYLVANIA they claim to be authentic and reliable. It deals with facts hitherto scattered and difficult of access, and frequently not to be found anywhere in published form. And when found it is often not to be trusted. To assure correctness the publishers have made strenuous endeavors to obtain their facts at first hand, gathering them from the persons concerned. Where this has not been possible they have made use of such trustworthy sources as Smull's Handbook and Congressional Record, "Records of Living Officers United States Navy," and they take pleasure in acknowledging their obligation to Wilbur J. Carr, of the State Department, whose information has been gathered in the same direct way. They, therefore, take pride in feeling that they are offering the public a work which is immediate in its sources of information, exhaustive in its design, creditably full in its performance, and whose facts are given in some satisfying detail, and not with the vexatious condensation necessary in works which deal with a whole country.

It has not been the purpose of the publishers to include every man or woman of some small local notoriety, their object being to give only men known widely in the State as leaders in their respective professions or lives of activity. In doing this it has been necessary to trust to personal decision in selecting, and various names may have been omitted which many readers may deem worthy of admission. Not holding their own judgment superior to that of others, and solicitous only to confine their selections to the names of persons who deserve a place in the book, they invite the freest suggestion and criticism from their readers, with the purpose of bringing future editions still more nearly up to the standard they desire to establish. They feel confident, however, that the possible sins of omission in this work are not many or flagrant, and that as it stands it will be found an invaluable addition to the history of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

ADDICKS, John Edward:

Gas works promoter; born in Philadelphia Nov. 21, 1841, a lineal descendant of Donal O'Sullivan Beare, of Dunbay Castle, County Cork, Ireland, leader in the religious war against Queen Elizabeth. He was afterward Earl of Bearhaven, and among his descendents were General John and Governor James Sullivan, of Revolutionary fame, and Major Thomas H. O'Sullivan Beare, whose daughter Barbara emigrated to America and married John Edward Charles Addicks, German Consul to Philadelphia. Mr. Addicks was a personal friend of John Marshall and Daniel Webster, and was the grandfather of the subject of this sketch. Mr. Addicks obtained his education in the Philadelphia public schools, graduating from the Central High School at fifteen years of age. His business career began in a wholesale dry goods store, where he remained till nineteen years old, when he entered the flour store of Levi Knowles. After becoming of age he was made a partner in this establishment, and proved very successful in developing the business. Three years later he embarked in a flour business of his own, and pushed it with such energy that in time he became the foremost dealer in his line of trade in Philadelphia. In 1864 he married Laura Wattson Butcher, daughter of Washington and Mary E. Butcher of Philadelphia. Mr. Addicks soon began investing his profits in Philadelphia real estate, and became prominent in this field of operations. He removed his residence in 1877 to Clayton, Del., a suburban settlement of Philadelphia. Shortly afterward he became interested in the development of water gas as an illuminant, then an infant industry, but a promising one. Mr. Addicks took hold of this with all his native energy, and became closely identified with its great development, his name becoming known in connection with it throughout the United States. He built works for the manufacture of water gas in Jersey City and also for the Consumers' Gas Company of Chicago, the latter being the pioneer of the Chicago Gas Trust. In 1884 he originated the Bay State Gas Company of Boston, and was the first to build water gas works in that city. He purchased in 1892 a controlling interest in the Brooklyn Gas Company and was elected its President, and became largely interested in other gas companies of Brooklyn. He also built a gas works in Wilmington, Del., for the Oxyhydrogen Company. He is, however, better known for the prominence he has held of late years in politics. An earnest Republican, he quickly took a strong interest in the political affairs of his adopted State, and as early as 1889 developed an ambition to represent Delaware in the United States Senate. In 1899 he received the largest vote for Senator in the Legislature, but failed of election, the "Union Republicans," the faction under his control, being bitterly opposed by the "Regular Republicans." In 1901 he was again a candidate, and again in 1903, but was both times defeated by the vigorous opposition, though controlling enough votes to prevent the election of any competitor. As a consequence of this long continued contest, Delaware for several years was represented by only one Senator, and for a period was without a Senator, Senator Kenney's term expiring March 4, 1901. The dead lock was broken in 1903 by the election of Lewis H. Ball for the short term, and James F. Allse, the candidate of the Addicks faction, for a long term, ending March 4, 1907. Address, Wilmington, Del.

AGNEW, Benjamin Lashells:

Presbyterian clergyman; son of Smith and Maria Mayes Agnew; born at Apollo, Armstrong County, Pa. ALLMAN, Herbert D.:

Manufacturer and merchant; born in Philadelphia, Jan. 30, 1863; educated in the public schools and the Industrial Art School; entered the employment of M. M. Kayser, dealer in wall paper, as junior clerk. While thus engaged he continued his art studies at the Industrial Art School and the Franklin Institute. In 1883 Mr. Kayser went to California for his health, leaving his youthful clerk practically in charge of the business, at that time a small one. Mr. Allman conceived the idea of establishing a mail order system. This project, original with him, was at once put into execution, and proved a decided success, the business growing rapidly. Mr. Kayser, on his return, highly commended his clerk's work and extended it, and in 1884 gave Mr. Allman—then twenty-one years old—an interest in the business. In 1888 he purchased a one-third interest, and in 1890, on Mr. Kayser's death, he obtained a half interest, the firm taking the name of Kayser & Allman. The business, meanwhile, had greatly developed, orders coming from nearly every State of the Union, and also from Australia and South America. The firm had the Wall Paper Trust to contend with, but did so successfully, refusing to take part in it. The establishment grew large, and shortly after 1890 the firm, in conjunction with some other parties, organized the Standard Wall Paper Company, which has, at Sandy Hill, New York, one of the largest manufactories of fine wall paper in this country. In 1898, in conjunction with his younger brother and Mr. Samuel Kayser (partners of Kayser & Allman) he started the Columbia Wall Paper Company, now located in Bristol, Pa., of which Herbert D. Allman is President, Samuel Kayser Vice President, and Justin P. Allman Secretary and Treasurer. One of the largest and most modern plants of its kind in America and turning out annually over five million rolls of higher grade wall paper. Plant occupies five acres of ground with branches (selling) under the name of Kayser & Allman in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Minneapolis. Address, 1214 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

BAILY, Joel J.:

Merchant and reformer; born at London Grove, Chester County, Pa., October 29, 1826. At the age of seventeen he went to Philadelphia, and entered the establishment of M. Morris Marple, a dealer in notions. Three years later, when only twenty years old, he bought out his employer and began business on his own account. The business was then quite small but it grew rapidly under his energetic management. In 1852 he closed the retail, and confined his business to the wholesale trade, taking in two of his clerks as partners, under the firm name of Joel J. Baily & Co. The steady growth of the business needed many changes of location, the final one being to the large double store, 719-21 Market St., in 1873, where the sales rose to $3,000,000 annually. In 1900 the business was sold out to the department store firm of Lit Brothers. Mr. Bailey became a member and director of the Union League in 1863, and later became a strong opponent of corruption in municipal affairs. When the Committee of One Hundred was formed in 1880 he became its treasurer, and worked actively in the cause of reform till the committee ceased to exist in 1886. He was a member of the Board of Finance of the Centennial Exposition; in 1882 was chairman of the Finance Committee of the Bi-Centennial Celebration of the founding of Philadelphia; in 1886 became chairman of the Citizens' Municipal Association, served also as a director of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Children from Cruelty; Vice President of the Fairmount Park Art Association and of the Pennsylvania Humane Society, member of the Board of Trade, and director of the Delaware Mutual Fire Insurance and Bell Telephone Companies. BECK, James M.:

Lawyer; born in Philadelphia, July 9, 1861; educated in Philadelphia schools and at the Moravian College, Bethlehem, Pa., graduating in 1880; received the honorary degree of LL. D. from Muhlenberg College in 1902; after a years' service as clerk in the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad office, he began the study of law under Albert A. Outerbridge, and was admitted to practice before the Philadelphia bar in 1884; his marked ability as an advocate was soon evident, and led in 1885 to a partnership with Hon. William F. Harrity, which continued till 1898, and in 1888 brought him the appointment by the United States Attorney General of Assistant United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania; his rapidly-increasing private practice forced him to resign this position in 1892, but in 1896 he received the appointment of United States Attorney for the same district, and held this position for four years, resigning July 11, 1900; he was immediately appointed Assistant Attorney General of the United States, which elevated post he retained till April 30, 1903; in 1898 he was the Democratic and Independent candidate for District Attorney of Philadelphia, but was defeated by P. F. Rothermel, the Republican candidate. As United States Attorney, he prosecuted many important criminal cases, convicting the Cuban filibusters, the Lancaster counterfeiters, and the derelict officials of the Chestnut Street Bank; in his prosecution of those who were breaking the neutrality laws punishing filibusterinig, he had to contend against the strong sentiment in favor of Cuban independence, and was opposed in the Court of Appeals by the eminent counsel, Senator Gray, of Delaware, but obtained a decision in favor of the Government. The case against the counterfeiters was also a notable one, and ended in the conviction, not only of the accused, but also of former United States District Attorney Ellery P. Ingham and his law partner, Harvey K. Newett, who were proved to be criminally concerned in the affair; as Master, appointed by the United States Court, he sold in April, 1902, the Philadelphia Record for $3,000,000, the highest price ever obtained for an American newspaper at public sale; in 1902 he entered the law firm of Sherman and Stirling, of New York, and removed to that city; he is also senior member of the firm of Beck, Robinson & Kane, of Philadelphia; in 1890 he married Lilla Mitchell, a daughter of James Mitchell, of Philadelphia. Mr. Beck's phenomenal progress in his profession has been partly due to his marked powers as an orator, which have been displayed on many public and private occasions; in 1892 he delivered the Fourth of July oration in Independence Square, and in 1893 the oration on Pennsylvania Day at the Chicago Exposition; another striking speech was that given at the unveiling of the Statue of Stephen Girard, in Philadelphia. Probably his most notable speech was that in response to the toast: "The American Bar," at the dinner given in London by the Bench and Bar Association of England to the similar association of the United States. Mr. Beck is a member of the Contemporary Club, and the Browning Society of Philadelphia, and of the Lotus Club of New York; is President of the New England Society, and is connected with various other associations. Office, 44 Wall St., New York.

BOSBYSHELL, Oliver C.:

Oliver C. Bosbyshell, soldier, enjoys the honorable distinction of having been the first Union soldier hurt by the enemy in the War of the Rebellion; he enlisted in April, 1861, and served his country until Oct. 1864; on the 18th day of April, 1861, as a Private in the Washington Artilleryists of Pottsville, Schuylkill County—the first command to respond to President Lincoln's call for seventy-five thousand men—he was marching with his comrades through Baltimore, en route to Washington, when the memorable attack was made upon them by Southern sympathizers; Private Bosbyshell was struck on the head with a brick. Colonel Bosbyshell was born in Vicksburg, Mississippi, on the 3rd of January, 1839; his father and mother, however, were natives of Philadelphia; he grew up in Schuylkill County, receiving a fair education in the public schools, and was a student in the law office of his uncle, W. L. Whitney, when the war broke out, and he immediately enlisted as a private in the Washington Artillery and served continuously throughout the Civil War, having attained the rank of Major; was mustered out of service Oct. 1, 1864. Returning to Pottsville, the war being virtually ended, Major Bosbyshell engaged in business; always a devoted Republican, he was nominated by his party in Schuylkill County in 1866 for Prothonotary; the county being Democratic, he was not elected, yet he received the highest vote of any Republican candidate of the party that year. In 1867 he became a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and organized Post 23, of Pottsville; he was its first commander; afterward he became District Commander of Schuylkill County; in 1869 he was elected Department Commander of Pennsylvania. In the same year he was made Register of Deposits in the United States Mint in Philadelphia; soon afterward he was made Assistant Coiner; he removed to Philadelphia and has lived in that city ever since. In January, 1877, he was appointed Coiner by President Grant and served as such until in February, 1885, he was appointed by Colonel Dechert, the City Controller, to the position of Chief Clerk in the Controller's Office; it was a tribute to Major Bosbyshell's worth that he, a Republican, should be selected for the next most important position in a Democratic Controller's office. Colonel Bosbyshell was appointed Superintendent of the Mint of the United States at Philadelphia by President Harrison on Oct. 17, 1899, and served a full term in that office, or until April, 1903, when he was made Vice President, and subsequently Treasurer of the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co., a position he still holds. Has been particularly interested in the National Guard of Pennsylvania for many years, having been Major of the Second Regiment in December, 1878, promoted Lieutenant Colonel and Colonel, serving in all positions with credit. In August, 1893, resigned and was placed on the retired roll of officers. However, when the late war with Spain absorbed the National Guard, Colonel Bosbyshell was called again into the ranks of the National Guard, and by Gov. Hastings's direction, organized the Nineteenth Regiment Infantry, National Guard of Pennsylvania, becoming its Colonel, a position he held until the mustering out of the regiment at the close of the war with Spain. Director of the Musical Fund Hall; Chairman of the trustees of University Lodge, No. 610, F. and A. M.; Companion of Pennsylvania Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States; one of the founders of the Pennsylvania Society Sons of the Revolution; treasurer of the Pennsylvania Commandery and Treasurer General of the National Commandery of the Military Order of Foreign Wars; a member of the Union League, Historical Society and Old Guard of the Second Regiment, United States Volunteers, and Past Commander of the Department of Pennsylvania Grand Army of the Republic, being a Comrade in Post 2, of this lic, being a Comrade in Post 2, of Philadelphia. BOYLE, Patrick O.:

Editor; born in the Rosses, Donegal, Ireland, in 1846; brought by his parents to America in 1847, the family settling in Butler County, Pa. Here his father died of ship fever, and the mother removed to Brady's Bend, where the boys, as they grew up, obtained employment in the iron works at that place, going to Pithole, then a busy petroleum centre, in 1865. Patrick engaged in manual labor, and continued to do work of various kinds throughout the oil region till 1874, when an attack of sunstroke incapitated him for outdoor work in the summer season. He now turned his attention to news reporting, connecting himself with a number of journals. After the failure of the Richburg Echo in 1881 Mr. Boyle began the work of "oil scouting," private oil reporting, gathering news which proved of much value to oil speculators and brokers. In 1885 he purchased the Oil City Derrick, with which paper his name has since been identified. It is an authority in all matters relating to petroleum, and has a reputation throughout the State, Mr. Boyle's editorial utterances being an important element in its standing and success. BROWN, William H.:

Chief Engineer of Pennsylvania Railroad; born in Lancaster County, Pa., Feb. 29, 1836; educated at the Philadelphia High School, and took up the profession of engineering, assisting in railroad and city surveys. In October, 1861, he was appointed by Col. Thomas A. Scott engineer of the military railroads in Northern Virginia, handling this difficult position with signal ability; in 1862 he became engaged as assistant engineer on the Pan Handle Road; in 1864 on the Pittsburg division of the Pennsylvania Railroad; in March, 1865, on the Oil Creek Road; in July became principal engineer of the Philadelphia and Erie Railroad; in 1869 took charge of the repair shops at Altoona, and subsequently held several engineering positions till Aug. 1, 1874, when he was appointed to the important post of Chief Engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Mr. Brown's fine ability has been shown in many instances, including examples of remarkably rapid bridge building during the Civil War and after floods. Among his chief works of construction may be named the magnificent Broad Street Station at Philadelphia. Address, 3510 Baring St., Philadelphia, Pa.

BROWN, Wiliam M.:

Lawyer and merchant; born in Greenville, Pa., in 1850; educated in the schools of New Castle, Pa.; after teaching and filling a position as bank clerk, he studied law under the late Judge McMichael, and was admitted to the bar of Lawrence County, Pa., in 1876. After a period of successful law practice, he accepted a position in 1883 as Special Agent in the United States Land Office, but soon left it, and for five years was engaged in other pursuits. After practicing at the bar again for two years, he became interested in railway concerns, being made Vice President and Manager of the New Castle Electric Street Railway, of which, in 1896, he became a Director and the Secretary and Treasurer. In 1884 he had entered into mercantile pursuits at the head of the firm of Brown, Thompson & Co., general dealers, and from 1888 to 1889 was Secretary and Treasurer of the Standard Paper Company; in later years he became prominently concerned in the street railway of Montgomery, Ala., and President of the Syracuse Rapid Transit Railway Company. Byran D. Hamlin of Smethport as a law student, and was there admitted to the bar in 1867. Settling at Corry, Pa., he formed a law partnership with Mr. Manley Crosby, and from 1874 to 1878 served as City Solicitor. After nine years in Corry, he removed to Bradford, Pa., where he became a member of the legal firm of Sterrett, Brown & Rose, and four years later of Brown & Roberts; this was dissolved in 1887, and after eight years' practice alone—five years as City Solicitor—he entered into partnership with Mr. F. P. Schoonmaker. Mr. Brown served as a private in the Civil War, at first in the New York Twenty-third Regiment and afterward in the First Pennsylvania Rifles, this service preceding his law studies; he has been concerned in most of the leading court cases since Bradford became a city in 1879, and has a large and lucrative practice; he was also concerned in several business enterprises(including a number of narrow gauge railroads, has served on the Smethport and Corry School Boards, and for six years was President of the Bradford Board of Trade. From 1883 to 1887 member of Congress, Sixteenth District Pennsylvania, Forty eighth and Forty-ninth Congresses; 1897 to 1899 Auditor for the War Department; 1900 to present time Auditor for the Navy Department. Address, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.

BROWNE, William H.:

Lawyer and author; born in Philadelphia Nov. 14, 1840; educated at the University of Pensylvania and Amherst College, where he was graduated A. M. in 1861. In 1899 he received from Ursinus College the honorary degree of LL. D.; for some years he was a teacher of the classics, history and elocution, but meanwhile studied law and was admitted to the Philadelphia bar in 1865; he quickly gained prominence as a brilliant advocate, and was retained in many important cases, being particularly successful in divorce suits. One of his most notable cases was that in which he opposed the Mount Morich Cemetery Corporation, which had refused to permit the body of a wealthy colored man to be buried in its grounds; he defeated the corporation in the lower court, and subsequently in the Supreme Court. In addition to his reputation as an advocate, Mr. Browne is widely known as an author in legal and lighter literature; his legal works comprise some fourteen volumes, some of which have become standard authorities; among these are "Commentary on the Law of Divorce," "Law of Negligence in Pennsylvania," "Law of Decedents' Estates in Pennsylvania," and the "Pennsylvania Legal Time Table," a very useful manual of laws and court rules; his lighter works embrace "Heart Throbs of Gifted Authors," "Witty Sayings by Witty People," "Famous Women of History," and several others, including an abridgment of the Waverley Novels. Mr. Browne was formerly an active cricket player, and was a Director of the Belmont Cricket Club; he was also actively interested in the reform movement in municipal politics, in connection with the Committee of One Hundred. BRUMM, Charles N.:

Lawyer; born at Pottsville, Pa., June 9, 1838; received a common school education, with the exception of one year at Pennsylvania College at Gettysburg, Pa.; served an apprenticeship at the trade of watchmaker; studied law two years; left studies and enlisted as a private under the first call of President Lincoln for three months' men, and was elected First Lieutenant of Company I, Fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers; after the expiration of his term re-enlisted Sept. 15, 1861, for three years, and was elected First Lieutenant of Company K, Seventy-Sixth Pennsylvania Volunteers, Nov. 18, 1861; was detailed on the staff of Gen. Barton as Assistant Quartermaster and aide-de-camp, which position he held under General Barton and General Pennypacker until the expiration of his term of service; resumed the study of law, and was admitted to the bar in 1871; has since practiced the profession of law at the Schuylkill County bar; was elected to Congress in 1878 to represent the Thirteenth District of Pennsylvania, but was counted out by 192 votes; during the administration of Persident Harrison he was appointed Deputy Attorney General, but declined to accept the appointment; was elected to the Forty-seventh, Forty-Eighth, Forty-ninth, Fiftieth, and Fifty-fouth Congresses, and re-elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress as a Republican, receiving 16,613 votes against 14,512 votes for Warren F. Shepherd, Democrat, and 239 votes for S. G. Hollopeter, Prohibitionist. Upon his return from the army Mr. Brumm became very conspicuous as Government Revenue Assessor, which office was made necessary by the income tax, which was then in existence, being levied upon all earnings above a certain sum. Lawlessness reigned so extensively in the county that no one would make assessments until Mr. Brum took it in hand, and after a number of desperate encounters succeeded in finnishing the work. He was later selected by the Union League, together with Mr. Benjamin Bannan, to procure certain legislation at Harrisburg: Such as the Green-Judge bill and the Jury and Police bills. Poitica prejudice ran so high at the time that, because of his actions at the State capita, he was compelled to fight the local courts for two years before he could be admitted to the bar, and only then then after he had been admitted to practice in the Lebanon County bar. Besides his career in Congress he has been very successful in his profession, having, in the midst of a large practice, tried upward of thirty Homeside cases, and only one of his clients was executed. During the great anthracite coal strike he was selected by District No. 9 of the United Mine Workers of America as their counsel to appear before the Strike Commission appointed by President Roosevelt, and took a very prominent part in the argument before the same. On the 6th of April, 1862, Mr. Brumm was married to Virginia James of Minersville, Pa. Address, Minersville, Pa.

CADWALADER, Charles E.:

tified with the principal public interests and movements throughout the history of Pennsylvania; like his progenitors he has been one of its most public spirited citizens. He is a graduate of the Departments of Arts and Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania, and has had a very active part in the promotion of its interests and in the elevation of the standard of medical education, taking a principal part in the procurement of the State Board of Medical Examiners and Licensers. The Civil War breaking out at the time of his graduation interrupted the practice of his profession for a number of years. Enlisting in 1861, in the First City Troop, whose services had been accepted by the United States Government, he remained in that branch of the service by accepting a commission in Col. Rush's Sixth Pennsylvania Cavalry Regiment, until transferred by General Hooker as one of his aides on the latter's assignment to the Command of the Army of the Potomac. He continued thereafter to serve with the General Staff of the Army, General Meade having also appointed him one of his Aides on succeeding General Hooker in the command. These officers entertained a high opinion of Colonel Cadwalader's services, Colonel Rush promoting him six files to a Captaincy during the Peninsular Campaign. He about the same time received an appointment as Major in the Third Pennsylvania Cavalry, which he declined, not wishing to leave his regiment. General Hooker in his recommendation for his brevet as Major mentions him as "especially distinguished for his gallantry and meritorious services in the battle of Chancellorsville, May 3, 1863, and the cavalry fight at Brandy Station, June 9, 1863," adding that "he served with marked zeal and devotion." Gen. Meade in his recommendation for his brevet as Lieutenant Colonel said, "I cannot speak too strongly of the activity, zeal and energy displayed by Captain Cadwalader during his services under me," and recommended that he be brevetted Lieutenant Colonel "for distinguished gallantry and good conduct at the battle of Gettysburg and in subsequent operations, including the campaign from the Rapidan to the James in 1864 and the siege of Petersburg." After the war he resumed the practice of medicine and is widely known for his philanthropic activities therewith, and in various public and political connections. Member of the Pennsylvania Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, Society of Colonial Wars, Society of the Cincinnati, College of Physicians and various clubs. Address, 1519 Locust St., Philadelphia, Pa.

COOKE, Jay:

Financier and railroad promoter; born in Sandusky, Ohio, Aug. 10, 1821; son of Hon. Elentheros Cooke, a lawyer of that place and a member of Congress from 1831 to 1833. Entering the banking house of E. W. Clark & Co., Philadelphia, in 1839, he soon became the confidential clerk of the firm, and eighteen months before he became of age was given power of attorney to sign all matters for the firm; he was admitted as a partner in 1842 and continued in the firm till 1858, when he retired for a time from the banking business to enter into that of negotiating railroad securities; the sale of the Pennsylvania State canals was negotiated by him. In 1861 he resumed the banking business, forming a firm known as Jay Cooke & Co., branches being afterward established in New York and Washington, and a branch in London known as Jay Cooke, McCulloch & Co., Mr. McCulloch, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, being a partner. While connected with E. W. Clark & Co. that firm had negotiated a large part of the government loans to carry in the Mexican War, and the experience then gained prepared Mr. Cooke for the far greater work of negotiating the Civil War loans, into which he very actively entered; the need for raising money for this war was immense and the credit of the government at its opening very low; each successive Secretary of the Treasury—Chase, Fessenden and McCulloch—did his best to raise war funds by direct negotiation of the government securities, but each was compelled to call Mr. Cooke to his aid as the sole fiscal agent of the government, and his service in this contingency was of the utmost value to the government financiers; it is said that he negotiated in all two thousand million dollars of government loans at a very small rate of compensation. The greatest financial operation undertaken by the house of Jay Cooke & Co. after the war was the disposal of the securities of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, an enterprise which proved too heavy during the financial panic of 1873, the house being forced to suspend; in subsequent years, however, the stocks and bonds of the road regained their value, the enterprise was completed, and the fortune of Mr. Cooke was restored. He is now a large owner of Western lands. Address, office, 122 South Fourth St., Philadelphia; residence, Ogontz, Pa.

President of the Pittsburg District of the United Mine Workers of America; born on Feb. 27, 1857, at Coatbridge, Scotland. Until 1886 worked in the coal mines of his native town. Fifteen years ago he moved to Pittsburg and worked in the McDonald mines until he retired to become President; has been President of the McDonald local union, a national organizer of the miners, a member of the District Executive Board, and since 1898 has been District President. In the few years he has held this office the membership has grown from 1,000 to 30,000 members. As a labor leader Mr. Dolan is known throughout the country and for years has been a member of the National Scale Committee of the United Mine Workers. He is looked upon as one of the best trades union orators and his administration has been marked by peace between operators and miners. He was instrumental in forming the Iron City Trades Council and two years ago was one of two delegates from American labor unions to the British Trades Council in London. Address, 426 Diamond St., Pittsburg, Pa.

DOLAN, Thomas:

Textile manufacturer; born in Montgomery County, in the State of Pennsylvania, on the 27th day of October, 1834, and while still young moved to Philadelphia, where he secured a position in a commission house where the principal business was the sale of fancy knit goods and hosiery. Here he got ideas which determined him to embark in the manufacturing business, and in 1861 he began in a small way to make knit goods at Hancock and Oxford Streets. In 1866 he changed to Berlin shawls, and continued until 1872, when the market declined, and Mr. Dolan began the manufacture of worsted materials for men's wear, and a little later fancy cassimere and ladies' cloaking materials. He gave up the production of knit goods in 1882 and devoted himself exclusively to men's wear, although the works are still known as the Keystone Knitting Mills. For many years he conducted his business alone, but now he has several partners, who look after certain branches of the great establishment, and the firm is known as Thomas Dolan & Company. Mr. Dolan is President of the Quaker City Dye Works Company, the Philadelphia Association of Manufacturers of Textile Fabrics, the Textile Dyers' Association, Vice President of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, and of the Union League Club of his native city. He is also President of the United Gas Improvement Company, a Director of the Philadelphia Traction Company, the Brush Electric Company, the School of Design for Women, the University Hospital, and

DONNELL, James J.:
President of Bank of Pittsburg; born on March 24, 1840; early education was received in the public schools of Allegheny. At the age of seventeen he secured employment as Junior Clerk in the banking house of N. Holmes & Sons. It was in this establishment that young Donnell laid the foundation of his career. His earnest attention to details and rapid assimilation of the technical knowledge of the business soon stamped him as a young man of promise. His promotion, therefore, was steady. In every department of the business entrusted to his care he devoted all his best energies, and, step by step, he advanced until, in 1872, he was admitted to partnership in the firm. On Oct. 1, 1899, he was elected to the Presidency of the Bank of Pittsburg. Although the bank, naturally, has his first attention, Mr. Donnell is interested in many other financial and commercial institutions, among which may be mentioned the Fidelity Title and Trust Company, of which he is Vice President. He is also a Director in the Allegheny General Hospital. Mr. Donnell was President of the Monongahela Navigation Company, which built and owned the dams and locks, and controlled the navigation of the Monongahela River. In 1897 this property was condemned and purchased by the Government, and in payment the largest check ever received in Pittsburg was rendered. He was one of the organizers and builders of the Citizens' Traction Railroad, which has helped to give Pittsburg one of the best systems of street railway of any city in the United States. Member of city of Pittsburg Sinking Fund Commission and Allegheny County Sinking Fund Commission. Married Miss Anna Warden, a daughter of William G. Warden, of Philadelphia, one of the organizers of the Standard Oil Company. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

After a short period of education in the University of Pennsylvania, he became a law student in the office of Hon. John C. Bullitt and was admitted to the bar in 1865. Two years later he was admitted to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. His business soon grew prosperous, being confined to railroad and general corporation law, in which he became consulting counsel of many corporations and General Solicitor for the Norfolk and Western Railroad. He devoted himself with zeal and earnestness to his practice and his business has grown to large proportions. About 1880 he became closely identified with the development of the coal and iron interests of Virginia and West Virginia. He has been to some extent an author, his pamphlet on "Our Fishery Rights in the North Atlantic," published in 1888, being an exhaustive investigation of an intricate and important subject which attracted much attention. DUFF, Levi Bird:

Lawyer; was born near Saulsburg, Huntingdon County, Pa., Sept. 13, 1837, of Pennsylvania parents. His father,

Samuel Duff, was born at Perkiomen Bridge, Montgomery County, and his mother, Catherine Eckeberger, in Huntingdon. He was educated at Eldersridge Academy and Allegheny College, graduating from the latter in June, 1857. He studied law in Pittsburg and was admitted to the bar in April, 1860. May 1, 1861, he enlisted in Company A, Ninth Regiment, Pennsylvania Reserve Corps, and was mustered into the United States service at Washington July 26, 1861, as Corporal. The regiment was engaged at Dranesville, Dec. 20, 1861, and the Commanding General (Ord) recommended a number of officers and privates "for reward for gallant conduct" in the engagement, among whom was Corporal Duff. Feb. 6, 1862, Mr. Duff was appointed Captain of Company D, 105th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, then in Heintzelman's division of the Army of the Potomac, subsequently the First Division of the Third Army Corps. Captain Duff had command of his company during the siege of Yorktown and at the battles of Williamsburg and Fair Oaks (or Seven Pines), where he was severely wounded in the right chest by a musket-ball which passed through his right lung. On recovering from his wound he rejoined his regiment at Harison's Landing, Aug. 16, 1862. The division was ordered to join General Pope, and when General Jackson captured Manassas Junction, Captain Duff with his company was guarding the railroad at Catlett's Station. He joined General Hooker in the pursuit of Jackson, and was engaged at Kettle Run Aug. 25, 1862. He rejoined his own regiment and was engaged at Bull Run Aug. 29 and 30, and at Chantilly Sept. 1, where General Kearney, commanding division, was killed. During the Antietam campaign the division lay in front of Washington, but joined the army on the march to the Rappahannock. Captain Duff commanded his company during this march and at the battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862. In March, 1863, he was appointed Acting Assistant Inspector General of the First Brigade, First Division, Third Corps. He served on the staff at Chancellorsville, and General Birney, commanding division, said he was "proud of the conduct displayed by Captain Duff on that field of battle." May 4, 1863, he was promoted to Major of his regiment, and May 11 he was appointed Acting Assistant Inspector General of the Third Division, Third Corps; and June 26 appointed Acting Assistant Inspector General of the First Division, Third Corps. He served on the staff at Gettysburg and in the campaign to the Rappahannock, including the affair at Manassas Gap, July 24, 1863. In November, 1863, he was placed in command of the 110th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, which he commanded in the Mine Run campaign and until Dec. 21. April 9, 1864, he was appointed acting Assistant Inspector General of the First Division, Third Corps, then the Third Division of the Second Corps. He served on the staff at the Wilderness, and was then, at his own request, returned to his regiment. He commanded his own regiment and the Sixty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers, which was added to his own for field service, from May 8 until June 18, and was engaged at Po River, Spottsylvania Court House, North Anna, Totopotomy, Cold Harbor, and the first assaults on Petersburg. June 18, in an assault on Petersburg, commonly called by the soldiers the "Hare House slaughter," he was wounded, with loss of his right leg. May 18, 1864, he was appointed Lieutenant Colonel of his regiment. Oct. 25, being disabled for field duty, he was, at his own request, discharged from the service. He returned to Pittsburg and resumed the practice of his profession. In 1865 he was elected District Attorney of Allegheny County, and held the office three years. Colonel Duff was married July 21, 1862, to Harriet H. Nixon, who died July 13, 1877. He was again married Jan. 16, 1882, to Agnes F. Kaufman. Two sons, children of the first wife,—Samuel Eckeberger and Hezekiah Nixon,—are living. Member of Pennsylvania Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. DURHAM, Israel W.:

Insurance Commissioner; born in Philadelphia Oct. 24, 1856; educated in the public schools; learned the trade of bricklaying, but soon became connected with his father in the flour business. Mr. Durham's career, however, soon became a political one, he taking an active interest in political affairs while quite young and becoming a leader very early after attaining his majority. He declined running for office until 1885, when he was nominated for Magistrate, and after an active campaign was elected. In 1897 he was elected State Senator, succeeding Boies Penrose, who was elect to the Senate of the United States. His election was nearly unanimous, only 72 votes being polled against him. He was frequently elected to State and National party conventions, and during the exciting contest for Sheriff between Alexander Crow and Samuel H. Ashbridge, Mr. Durham was the leader of the section of the Republican Party which carried the election in favor of Mr. Crow. He was made Insurance Commissioner of the State in 1900, a position which he still retains, and under which his popularity and influence in party councils have become very great. Address, 2123 Pine St., Philadelphia, Pa.

EISNER, Moritz:

Mineral water dealer; born in Vienna, Austria, in 1850, where he became an apprentice in a drug store. He came to America when nineteen years of age, making Philadelphia his home, and engaging there in two wholesale drug houses in succession. In 1880 he purchased the business of his employers, Oramer & Small, and began business on his own account. While thus employed, he became the regular correspondent of several German pharmaceutical journals. In 1873 he had paid a visit to his native city, and there acted as correspondent for the Philadelphia Democrat during the Vienna World's Exposition. He also wrote for the New York Tribune, in connection with Bayard Taylor and G. V. Smalley. After his return home he was connected with the Philadelphia Democrat for a year or more. He then returned to the house of Oramer & Small, which he afterward purchased, as above stated. His next enterprise was in the importation of German mineral waters to the United States, and, in partnership with Joseph Mendelson, the importation of the celebrated Malt Extract of Johann Hoff. The demand for this article grew so great that it became necessary to build a large establishment in the United States to supply it. The firm of Eisner & Mendelson removed its headquarters to New York in 1887, where it became the American representative of the most famous mineral waters of Europe and also dealt in those of America. Mr. Eisner was for many years a Director of the Philadelphia Maennerchor and the German Club. Address, 613 West End Ave., New York city.

In 1882 he entered the law department of the University of Michigan, graduating in 1884, and being admitted to the bar of Indiana County in 1885. Mr. Elkin's legal practice has been active and successful, though broken into by legislative duty for the State, he being elected a member of the House of Representatives in 1884, before his admission to the bar, and re-elected in 1886. While in the House he was chairman of a number of committees and has served as chairman of the State Committee of his party, and delegate to several Republican State Conventions. He was appointed in 1895 Deputy Attorney General of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and in 1899 was appointed Attorney General of the State. He was a prominent candidate for Governor in 1902, but, though popular with the people, he was defeated in the State Convention, when Mr. Pennypacker became Governor. Mr. Elkin retired from the office of Attorney General and devoted himself actively to legal practice in Indiana County, in whose concerns he has taken an active interest, having been President of its school board for the past nine years, a trustee of the Indiana State Normal School, and active in the development of its coal fields. He is President of the Farmers' Bank of Indiana, one of the leading financial institutions of the county. In March, 1904, on the declination of Gov. Pennypacker to be a candidate for the vacancy on the bench of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, Mr. Elkin was unanimously nominated for that exalted judicial position. Address, Indiana, Pa.

FARRELLY, Stephen:

American News Company manager; born in Ireland in 1843. His father emigrated to America during the political troubles of 1848, and in 1860 the son entered the service of Dexter & Brother, news agents, in New York, and afterward prominent members of the American News Company, founded in 1864. Leaving this employment at this time, Mr. Farrelly went South, and there undertook the management of the book firm of John W. Cooper & Co., of Savannah, Ga., then in a desperate state as a result of the war. By his strenuous exertions he made compromises with the creditors of the house, and, in partnership with the firm, managed for several years its business with great success. Selling out his interest in 1869, he returned to New York and established the National News Company.

This, after a few years of prosperous business, became merged in the American News Company, of which Mr. Farrelly was made a Director. In 1878 he went to Philadelphia as manager of the Central News Company, a branch house of the American News Company. The business of this company was handled by him with much efficiency, he inaugurating the wagon delivery system and also the method of short credits and quick collections. It now occupies a handsome building on South Washington Square and does a thriving business. Mr. Farrelly is a Director of the City Trust, Safe Deposit and Surety Company, the Beneficial Saving Fund Society, and the St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, and is a member of various clubs and associations. Some years ago he gave up his connection with the Central News Company and is now in the New York house of the American News Company. Address, 39 Chambers St., New York.

FLAGG, Stanley G.:

Manufacturer; born in Whitesboro, N. Y., on March 13, 1830; grandson of a famous doctor of Hartford, Conn., one of the most learned medical men of his time. Mr. Flagg spent his early years in Boston, in whose public schools he was educated. He removed to Philadelphia at fourteen years of age and entered a retail dry-goods store, in which he remained for ten years. His tendency, however, was toward mechanics, and in 1855 he started a malleable iron business in a small way, developing the new idea of making of this material the fittings for gas, steam and water pipes, then made of brass. His idea proved so successful that his trade rapidly grew and in 1863 larger works became necessary. In 1865 he bought his present property at Nineteenth St. and Pennsylvania Ave., and in 1881 greatly increased it by purchasing adjoining properties. He subsequently admitted his sons into the business, the firm name becoming Stanley G. Flagg & Co. In 1896 he built a subsidiary factory at Pottstown, Pa. He added to his business in 1872 the manufacture of stove lining and fire-brick, and in 1896 purchased a pottery on Ridge Ave. Mr. Flagg also very successfully added steel castings to his iron business, these, as well as his iron fittings, being of so superior a quality that they command a very large trade in the United States and foreign countries. Address, 1731 Wallace St., Philadelphia, Pa.

FORTIG, John:

Oil and real estate operator; born in Venango County, Pa., March 17, 1837; was educated in the county schools; worked on his father's farm till he was sixteen years of age. At the age of seventeen he left home for the Susquehanna River lumbering region, performing the journey of one hundred and fifty miles on foot. While working there he studied diligently and made such progress that he became a school teacher at Neilltown in 1857. Here he taught and continued his studies till the oil discoveries in Western Pennsylvania attracted attention, when Mr. Fortig, with little money, obtained a sub-lease on five acres of undeveloped territory. This first enterprise failed, but others were more successful and in 1861 he formed a partnership with John W. Hammond, which conducted some very profitable operations. Establishing himself in Titusville, he became one of its largest property holders and most enterprising business men. The Fortig Block, built by him, was at the time the largest structure in the city. He was elected Mayor of Titusville in 1873 and was twice re-elected, and in 1876 was elected State Senator on the Democratic ticket. In 1878 he was candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and in 1882 he was elected Vice President of the Commercial Bank of Titusville, and is also President of the Titusville Iron Works and the National Oil Company. He has been connected with other important industrial companies of the oil region. Address, Titusville, Pa.

FREYMAN, William G.:

Lawyer; born in Carbon County, Pa., July 4, 1838; educated in the public schools, and served as a teacher for five terms. His later business career was somewhat varied, he being at times engaged in the mercantile business and at others as surveyor and civil engineer, which he pursued for twelve years. He took part in the Civil War as Orderly Sergeant of Company G, 176th Regiment, Pennsylvania Infantry; after the close of his term of service he was given the commission of a Lieutenant and recruited a company, but the war ended before it was mustered into service. He began the study of law in 1871, when thirty-three years old, and was admitted to the Carbon County bar in 1873, when he became associated with his preceptor, Gen. Charles Albright, under the firm title of Albright & Freyman; the firm was engaged in the "Mollie Maguire" trials, and continued till the death of General Albright in 1880; he entered into several later partnerships, the latest, formed in 1901, being Freyman & Nothstein. Mr. Freyman's practice, both alone and as member of a firm, has been large and important; more extensive, perhaps, than that of any other attorney in the county. He is attorney for several large corporations, and is a Director of the Prince Manufacturing Company and the Carbon Metallic Paint Company, and Vice President of the Mauch Chunk Trust Company. On the steep mountainside, back of the town, he owns a large tract, which he has laid out in terraces, twenty-two in all, which are connected by a flight of 353 steps; this formerly barren land he has made fertile, and raises there large quantities of small fruits; there is no other garden like it in the country, constructed as it is in the side of a very steep mountain. Address, Mauch Chunk, Pa.

FRICK, Enclid Bernardo:

Major United States Army; son of Dr. A. P. Frick; born in Philadelphia, Pa., July 29, 1867; descended from Henry Frick, who emigrated from Berne, Switzerland, about 1685, and settled in Lancaster County, Pa. Married Sarah E. Bunting, Oct. 30, 1889; graduated in medicine in class of 1888 at the University of California; appointed assistant Surgeon United States Army, with rank of First Lieutenant, Oct. 29, 1889; promoted Captain and Assistant Surgeon, Oct. 29, 1894; Major and Surgeon, June 28, 1902. Address, Fort Snelling, Minn.

FRICK, Henry Clay:

Coke and iron manufacturer; born at West Overton, Pa., Dec. 19, 1849. His ancestors came from Switzerland in 1750 and settled in Pennsylvania. His maternal grandfather, Abraham Overholt, was one of the largest landholders of his time in the southwest section of the State. Mr. Frick was educated in the public schools and at Otterbein University, Ohio, and began his business life as a store clerk at Mount Pleasant, Pa., becoming, in 1869, a bookkeeper in his grandfather's office at Broad Ford. The value of the coking-coal deposits at this locality attracted his attention in 1871, and after a thorough investigation of the material and the business, then in its infancy, he formed with several friends the partnership of H. C. Frick & Co., bought 300 acres of coal lands, and built about fifty coke ovens. The business proved very profitable, there being a ready sale for its product, and after the panic of 1873 he bought and leased works and lands widely; in 1876 bought out his partners, and in 1882 formed the H. C. Frick Coke Company, with $2,000,000 capital. The Carnegie Bros. & Co. soon became large stockholders in the company, and the capital was increased to $10,000,000. This company is now the largest coke producer in the world, owning in the Connellsville region 40,000 acres of coal lands and 12,000 coke ovens, employing more than 11,000 hands and yielding about 25,000 tons of coke daily. In 1889 Mr. Frick became a member of the firm of Carnegie Bros. & Co., and on its consolidation in 1892 as the Carnegie Steel Company, Limited, with a capital of $25,000,000, he became the executive head of the organization. Of the labor disturbances with which he had to deal, much the most notable was the strike at the Homestead works of the company in 1892. This was brought about by his efforts to equalize the rates of wages and reduce the extravagant pay of the "tonnage men." A lockout ensued, extreme disorder and rioting broke out, and on July 23, while he was seeking to adjust the difficulties, his office was entered by a man named Berkman, who shot him twice and stabbed him. In spite of his severe wounds he kept up the contest, and in the end won the fight, and within less than a year after the new scale of wages was adopted, the men acknowledged that he was right, and the strike unjustified. Since 1892 there have been no more labor troubles in the two companies with which Mr. Frick is connected, and their employees are the best paid workmen in the world. In 1895 his duties as Chairman of the Carnegie Steel Company were reduced by the appointment of a President, and in 1897 he ceased to manage the minor affairs of the coke company. In 1899 the properties of which he was the official head consisted of mines yielding 6,000,000 tons of iron ore annually; the coke lands and product above mentioned; steamship coal and ore carriers on Lake Erie; a railroad from Lake Erie to Pittsburg; 70,000 acres of natural gas territory; nineteen blast furnaces and five steel mills, yielding 3,250,000 tons of steel annually. In 1899 a personal dispute on financial matters arose between Mr. Frick and Mr. Carnegie, but this was soon adjusted and was followed by the formation of the Carnegie Company, with $160,000,000 paid-up capital, and including the steel and coke works with numerous subsidiary companies. Since then the United States Steel Company has been organized, with $1,100,000,000 capital, the most stupendous industrial enterprise in the world. Mr. Frick personally is a modest and unassuming man, though with abundant firmness and courage when needed. He is unostentatiously and genuinely charitable. In 1881 he was married to Adelaide H. Childs, of Pittsburg, and has one son and one daughter living. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

GIBBS, William W.:

Gas corporation manager; born in Hope, Warren County, N. J., March 8, 1846. He became a store boy at fourteen and served as clerk in a country store till twenty-three years of age, when he was made a partner in the concern. Two years later, in 1871, his partner died, and he closed out the business. Mr. Gibbs then went to New York and began the retail dry goods business and in 1873 organized a firm of wholesale grocers. In 1875 he withdrew from this line of trade almost penniless. Becoming acquainted with Ferdinand King, who had invented a process for making gas from petroleum, he formed a partnership with him, styled the National Petroleum Gas Company of New York. The ability and energy of Mr. Gibbs soon obtained a contract to build a small gas works for this company, and the gas, proving satisfactory, he pushed the business so actively that within seven years he had built more than a hundred works, in all parts of the country. The large quantity of petroleum used in his operations brought him into close connection with the officials of the Standard Oil Company and in 1882, as a result of his endeavors, the United Gas Improvement Company was organized in Philadelphia, with Mr. Gibbs as its general manager. Under his control this company became highly successful, and is now one of the most prominent gas corporations of the country, making all the gas used in Philadelphia. Mr. Gibbs has long been connected with railroad interests, especially with the Philadelphia, Reading & New England Railroad Company, and the completion of the great Poughkeepsie Railroad Bridge is a monument to his energy. He has been largely interested in Pennsylvania Heat, Light & Power Company, the Electric Storage Company, and the Wellsbach Light Company, and in 1897 he organized the Marsden Company, for the purpose of manufacturing celluloid from the pith of corn-stalks. After graduating from college in 1879, became Professor of Ancient Languages in Union Seminary, New Berlin, Pa., and in 1880 its Principal. When, in 1887, Union Seminary became Central Pennsylvania College, he became its first and only President; when in 1902 Central Pennsylvania College was merged with Albright College at Myerstown, Pa., he was elected Professor of Latin and Hebrew and Secretary to the Faculty. He is an ordained clergyman of the United Evangelical Church and a member of the Central Pennsylvania Conference. Address, Albright College, Myerstown, Pa.

GOBIN, John P. S.:

Lawyer and soldier; born Jan. 26, 1837, at Sunbury, Pa.; on the paternal side he is descended from good old Revolutionary stock, his great grandfather, Charles Gobin, being Captain in one of the Berks County associated battalions during the struggle for independence, serving in the Jersey campaign, and in the summer of 1780 on active duty on the frontiers of Pennsylvania; his grandfather, Edward Gobin, was a soldier in the War of 1812-1814. He received an academic education, learned the art of printing, and was admitted to the Northumberland County bar in 1858. When the Civil War threatened, before the firing upon Sumter, he tendered his services to Gov. Curtin, was accepted, and on returning to Sunbury commenced the organization of what eventually was Company F, Eleventh Pennsylvania, being commissioned First Lieutenant; his company participated in the first fight at Falling Waters, and volunteered to remain in the service at the request of Gen. Patterson; after the expiration of the three months' campaign he reorganized the company, and Sept. 2, 1861, was mustered in as Captain of Company C, Forty-seventh Regiment; this command first served in Smith's division of the Army of the Potomac, but in January, 1862, was ordered to Florida, and the regiment garrisoned Fort Taylor on the island of Key West, and Fort Jefferson at Dry Tortugas. In the summer of 1862 the regiment was sent to Hilton Head, S. C., to assist in the attack on the aproaches to Charleston, and participated in the battle of Pocotaligo. In the autumn of the foregoing year the Forty-seventh was the first regiment which reenlised under the so-caled Veteran order. Subsequently the comand participated in Red River expedition. At the battle of Pleasant Hill, Captain Gobin was especially commended for bravery by Gen. J. W. McMillan, who recommended him to Governor Curtin for promotion. For services rendered in that campaign he was detailed by General Banks to conduct all the prisoners captured on the expedition to New Orleans. In July, 1864, the regiment came north, and joined General Sheridan in the Shenandoah Valley. Promoted to the majority, Major Gobin participated in that famous campaign and the battle of Cedar Creek. Major General McMillan, commanding the First Division of that corps, wrote Governor Curtin, commending Colonel Gobin's conduct. In 1865 Hancock's Veteran Corps was organized, and the Forty-seventh was assigned to it, Major Gobin having been promoted November 4, 1864, Lieutenant Colonel, and Jan. 3, 1865, Colonel of the Regiment. When the spring campaign opened, Colonel Gobin, having been brevetted Brigadier General, March 13, 1865, was placed in command of the Second Brigade, First Division, of the Nineteenth Army Corps, co-operating with Grant, heading for Lynchburg, where he received news of Lee's surrender, and the force returned. On the day of the assassination of President Lincoln they were ordered to Washington, and a picket, or rather skirmish line, was thrown around the entire city. The Forty-seventh participated in the grand review, and after it was over the regiment was again sent South. Ordered at first to Savannah, subsequently to Charleston, General Gobin was placed in command of that city, and at the same time made Provost Judge. All the courts having been suspended, he was the only judicial officer in that city during the reconstruction period, and the regiment was finally discharged Jan. 9, 1866. Returning home, General Gobin resumed the practice of law at Lebanon. A member of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Loyal Legion, Grand Master of the Grand Encampment of Knights Templar of the United States, and a prominent member of the State Senate. Married Annie M. Howe in 1866 at Florida. He is a Director in numerous industrial institutes. Since 1884 he has been State Senator; is at the present time commanding the Third Brigade, Pennsylvania National Guard. In the war with Spain he served as Brigadier General of the United States Volunteers; was elected in 1898 Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania. During the coal strike in 1902 he commanded the Pennsylvania National Guard. He has been a prominent member of the Grand Army of the Republic for many years; also Commander-in-Chief from 1897 to 1898. Address, Lebanon, Pa.

Jurist; born in Philadelphia Nov. 16, 1855; educated in the public schools, graduating from the Central High School in 1873; studied law in the office of Lewis O. Cassidy, and was admitted to the bar in 1876. He entered actively upon the practice of law, but became also energetic in Democratic party movements, and was elected to the Senate of Pennsylvania in 1880. As a legislator he was earnest in the support of economic measures, and was especially so in his labor for the passage of an apportionment bill, as required by the Constitution. Failing in this, he refused to accept his salary for the extra session, on the ground that the members, not having obeyed the mandate of the Constitution, were not entitled to any pay. In 1885 he was appointed a Judge of Philadelphia County, to fill a vacancy, and was elected for the full term in November, 1886. In 1896 he was re-elected for a second ten years' term. Judge Gordon is noted for his fine powers of oratory, his charges upon the bench being models of concise and lucid elocution, and his public addresses meeting with warm approbation. GRADY, John C.:

State Senator from Philadelphia; was born Oct. 8, 1847, at Eastport, Me., and early removed to Philadelphia; educated at the High School and University Law School; admitted to the bar in Independence Hall October, 1871; has continued in the active practice of his profession in the city of Philadelphia; is a Trustee of the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital and College; elected to the State Senate in 1876, from the Seventh District, for the term of four years; re-elected in 1880, 1884, 1888, 1892 1896 and 1900; was Chairman of the Special Committee of the Senate and House appointed to receive General U. S. Grant, returning from his tour around the world; in 1881 a factional contention arose over the office of Surveyor of the Port of Philadelphia, when President Garfield tendered the appointment to Senator Grady, which he declined, and the office remained vacant until President Arthur succeeded to the Presidency; for ten years has been Chairman of the Republican caucus, in accordance with the custom of seniority; has voted for more bills that have become laws and cast more votes for United States Senators than any other Pennsylvanian; held the Chairmanship of the Judiciary General Committee eight years, and of the Finance Committee for the past sixteen years, taking a leading part in debates and conduct of the body; twice elected President pro tempore of the Senate, serving from May, 1887, to May, 1889; this term, making twenty-eight years, is the longest continuous service in the history of the State; his fugitive from justice act and the original title insurance law were innovations at the time. His efforts established the Superior Court, and, espousing the cause of the ladies' organizations seeking legislation separating children from adult offenders, he passed the Juvenile Court act in addition to many others, changing the practice before the courts. During this time many of his colleagues have been sent to Congress or taken judicial stations throughout the State, but frequent offers of such preferment to Senator Grady have always been declined. Residence, 111 North Nineteenth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

GRAFLY, Charles:

Sculptor; born in Philadelphia, Dec. 3, 1862; son of Charles and Elizabeth (Simmons) Grafly. Both his parents were born at Chestnut Hill, in Montgomery County, Pa., of Quaker extraction. Charles Grafly attended the public schools of Philadelphia until he was seventeen years of age, after which he was employed at Struther's marble works, Philadelphia, where he remained five years and learned the art of reproducing figures in marble. During this period he attended the art classes of the Spring Garden Institute, and in 1884 was admitted to the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, and for four years studied modeling and painting under Thomas Eakins. He went to Paris in 1888; studied sculpture under Chapu, and drawing under Bouguereau and Fleury, also at Ecole des Beaux Arts until the spring of 1890. He exhibited at the Salon, in 1890, two ideal busts, "St. John" and "Daedalus." The latter was in 1891 exhibited in Philadelphia, awarded honorable mention by the Temple Trust Fund, purchased and cast in bronze by the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts, and is in its permanent collection. During the winter of 1890-1891 he modeled in Paris a life-size nude female figure, entitled "Mauvais Prèsage," which was exhibited at the Salon of 1891, receiving honorable mention. This statue is now in the permanent collection of the Detroit Art Museum. Having visited the art centers of Europe, he, in 1892, returned to America and became instructor in sculpture at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, and at the Drexel Institute. In 1893 he exhibited his collected works at the Columbian Exposition, Chicago, receiving a medal and a certificate of merit. He also was awarded a silver medal at the Atlanta Exposition, in 1895, for his bronze bust, "Portrait of My Mother," modeled in 1892. The two succeeding years saw the completion of many portrait busts. Returning to Paris in June of that year, he immediately commenced work on a heroic size nude figure (male), the "Vulture of War," finished in 1896, meanwhile studying under M. Dampt, and completed four portrait busts. Returning to Philadelphia in the fall of 1896, Mr. Grafly returned to the faculty of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts. In 1897 the group, "Symbol of Life," was exhibited at the Academy, followed in 1898 by the bronze group, "From Generation to Generation," and two portrait busts. The gold medal of honor was given by the Academy for this and previous years' exhibits. During the winter of 1899-1900 the Charles Goodwin Sands memorial medal for the College of Architecture at Cornell University was made, also heroic size busts of Admiral David D. Porter, John B. Gest, and a colossal figure of Major Gen. John F. Reynolds for the Smith memorial, Fairmount Park, Philadelphia. In 1900 he exhibited five works at the International Exposition in Paris, and was awarded a gold medal; this exhibit consisted of "The Vulture of War," "The Symbol of Life," "From Generation to Generation," "Portrait of My Mother," and a portrait of Mrs. Charles Grafly. Mr. Grafly executed the main fountain, "Man," for the Buffalo Exhibition of 1901, for which he was awarded a gold medal; also portrait busts, notably that of James McManes, Dr. Louis Starr, Joseph De Camp and Edward H. Coates. Mr. Grafly was married in Philadelphia in 1895 to Frances Sekeles of Corinth, Miss., and has one child. Member of Council of National Sculpture Society, Society of American Artists, associate of National Academy of Design, member of Architectural League of New York, and Art Club of Philadelphia. Received Gold medal at Charleston Exhibition; commissioned to make permanent figure for Art Palace, St. Louis Exposition, and portrait statue of Thomas Jefferson, figures of "England" and "France" for new Custom House, New York, and to make the medal of award for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Address, 2140 North 12th St.; studio, 2200 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

GREGG, David McMurtrie:

Brevet Major General United States Volunteers; born April 10, 1833, at Huntingdon, Pa., where his father, Matthew D. Gregg, practiced law, and where his maternal grandfather, David McMurtrie, had settled before the Revolution. General Gregg is a grandson also of Andrew Gregg, who was in the United States House of Representatives from 1791 to 1807; in the United States Senate from 1807 to 1813; and Secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania from 1820 to 1823. Andrew Gregg's father, also named Andrew, came from Londonderry, Ireland, to Pennsylvania in 1712 , and died at Carlisle in 1789. A more remote ancestor was David Gregg, of Argyleshire, Scotland, who was a captain in Cromwell's army. Another military forefather of General Gregg was his great-grandfather, Gen. James Potter, of the Pennsylvania Line, who became Vice President of Pennsylvania in 1781. Educated at Milnwood, Huntingdon County, and at the University at Lewisburg, young Gregg entered the United States Military Academy at West Point, July 1, 1851, graduating in 1855. He was commissioned Brevet Second Lieutenant of Dragoons July 1, 1855, and then began his arduous life of the trooper upon the plains of the West and the battle fields of the Civil War. Before the war, as an officer of the First Dragoons, Gregg had seen active service in New Mexico, California, Oregon, and Washington Territory. He was on the Spokane expedition in 1858, and was engaged in the desperate combat at Tohotsnimme, and in the combat at Four Lakes in September, 1858, and other Indian fights. As Captain of the Sixth Cavalry he served in the defences of Washington from the fall of 1861 until promoted in January, 1862, to be Colonel of the Eighth Pennsylvania Cavalry, after which he participated in the battles of Seven Pines and Fair Oaks in May, 1862, and Glendale and Malvern Hill in June and July. In November of that year he was made a Brigadier General and placed in command of the Second Cavalry Division of the Army of the Potomac. In 1863 he took part in Stoneman's Raid, and was at Brandy Station, Aldie, Upperville, Gettysburg (where, on the right flank on July 3, he repulsed Stuart's attempt with four brigades of Confederate Cavalry to reach the rear of Meade's Army, simultaneously with Pickett's assault in front), Shepherdstown, Culpeper Court House and Rapidan Station, Sulphur Springs, Auburn and Bristoe Station, and at New Hope Church and Parker's Store in the Mine Run campaign; and in 1864 at Todd's Tavern, in Sheridan's Raid, at Ground-Squirrel Church, Meadow Bridge, Hawes' Shop, Gaines' House, Trevilian Station, Tunstall Station,

St. Mary's Church, Warwick Swamp, Darbytown, Lee's Mills, Charles City Road, Deep Bottom, Ream's Station, Peebles' Farm, Vaughn Road, Boydton Plank Road, and Bellefield, besides many minor actions and skirmishes. From March 26, to April 6, 1864, he commanded the Cavalry Corps of the Army of the Potomac, and the Second Cavalry Division again from April 6, 1864, to Feb. 3, 1865, in the Richmond campaign, being in command of all the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac from Aug. 1, 1864, to Feb. 3, 1865. In many of the long list of cavalry combats in which he was engaged Gen. Gregg was in chief command. On Aug. 1, 1864, he had been made Brevet Major General United States Volunteers "for highly meritorious and distinguished conduct throughout the campaign, particularly in the reconnoissance on the Charles City Road." On Feb. 3, 1865, he resigned. The war was then practically over. Gen. Gregg was appointed by the President United States Consul at Prague in 1874, but he resigned the position in the same year, returned to the United States, and subsequently resided at Reading, Pa. Upon the death of General Hancock, in 1886, Gen. Gregg succeeded him as Commander of the Pennsylvania Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, which office he held for many years. In 1891, though without political aspirations, he was elected Auditor General of Pennsylvania by an immense majority. Gen. Gregg is almost the last survivor of the long list of distinguished Pennsylvania soldiers who held high command in the Union Army. Address 1516 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

GREEN, John Pugh:

Vice President Pennsylvania Railroad; born in Philadelphia July 31, 1839. He was educated in the Philadelphia public schools, graduating with credit from the Central High School. While at this school he applied himself especially to the study of shorthand writing, at a time when the recent system of stenography was in its infancy. He foresaw the importance of the art, made earnest efforts to perfect himself in it, and became an expert stenographer, an accomplishment to which he largely owed his early success in life. His school life was followed by a period devoted to the general study of law, and in due time he procured admission to the Philadelphia bar, where he was beginning to make his mark in 1861, when the Civil War broke out. The young lawyer at once enlisted in the Union service, and remained in the army till the end of the war, when he had won the rank of Captain, and was Assistant Adjutant General on the staff of Gen. Thomas L. Kane, commander of the famous Pennsylvania Bucktail Brigade. Returning to private life early in 1865, Captain Green entered the services of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as private secretary to Col. Thomas A. Scott, then First Vice President of the company. In this position his knowledge of stenography was of great assistance. On Jan. 1, 1866, he became Secretary and Treasurer of the Milwaukee and Minnesota Railway Company, a service in which he remained till Feb. 1, 1868. On July 1, 1869, he resumed his position as secretary to Colonel Scott, holding it till 1874, when he was promoted assistant to the President. His next promotion came on Oct. 1, 1882, when he was made Fourth Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. On June 1, 1886, he was elected Third Vice President, and on March 1, 1893, Second Vice President of the company, a position which gave him general charge of the accounting department and special supervision over the lines west of Pittsburg. On Feb. 10, 1897, he was made First Vice President. Captain Green has long devoted much of his leisure time to the health-giving game of cricket, and has been President of the Belmont Cricket Club. Address, Rosemont, Pa.; office, 211 Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, Pa.

GROW, Galusha Aaron:

Ex-Congressman; born at Ashford (now Eastport), Windham County, Conn., Aug. 31, 1822. In 1834 he moved to Susquehanna County with his widowed mother, who bought a farm in Lenox Township. Here the boy worked and attended school; prepared for college in Franklin Academy, and in 1840 entered Amherst College, where he was graduated with high honors some years later. He began the study of law in 1845 in the office of Hon. F. B. Streeter, of Montrose, Pa., and was admitted to practice in April, 1847. He is now the oldest member of the Susquehanna County bar. Mr. Grow, at that time a Free Soil Democrat, was elected to Congress in 1850 and continued a member for twelve years. In 1854, on the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, he severed his connection with the Democratic party, and two years later was concerned in the formation of the Republican party, which he represented in Congress during the last six years of his term of service. In 1861 Mr. Grow was elected Speaker of the House, and held this responsible position during the first two years of the war, his membership ending March 4, 1863. His services in Congress covered a momentous period in National affairs, including the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, the Kansas troubles, and the other events leading to the war. He was the author of the Homestead bill, passed during this period, in favor of which he made five set speeches during as many Congresses, finally signing it as Speaker. He left Congress in feeble health, engaged in the lumber trade in Luzerne County, and later in the oil business in Venango County, and spent four years (1871-1875) in Texas as President of the Houston and Great Northern Railroad. Returning to his old home in Pennsylvania, he again entered the political field, canvassing actively for Hartranft for Governor and Hayes for President. In 1879 President Hayes offered him the Ministry to Russia, but he declined the office. In 1894 he was again returned to the House, as Congressman-at-Large, and was re-elected in 1896 by the largest majority ever given in the United States for a candidate for any office. He was elected again in 1898, and a fourth time in 1900, making his total service in Congress twenty years. During the period from 1894 to 1903 he was Chairman of the Committee on Education. Mr. Grow retired in 1903, and still lives at his old home. Address, Glenwood, Pa.

He is the leader of the Democratic party in Pennsylvania, and a very prominent member of the National Committee. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

GUFFEY, James M.:

Petroleum operator; born in Sewickley, Westmoreland County, Pa., Jan. 19, 1839. His paternal ancestor, of Scotch descent, came to Philadelphia in 1738 and settled in Westmoreland County as early as 1758, going west in the track of the expedition against the French at Fort Duquesne. The family purchased part of the territory of the present township of Sewickley in 1780, and there the descendants of the Guffeys still dwell. As a boy Mr. Guffey lived and worked on his father's farm, gaining a good education, of a commercial character, in the local schools, and when eighteen he became clerk in the service of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company at Louisville, Ky. Several years later he resigned to accept a position with the Adams Southern Express Company at Nashville, Tenn. Shortly afterward he was drawn back to Pennsylvania by the great oil developments in that State, and became an agent for the Gibbs & Sterrett Company, manufacturers of oil-well machinery and appliances at St. Petersburg, Pa. He soon entered actively into the oil business, investing in oil wells, pipe lines, and various local enterprises, his operations growing with remarkable rapidity until they covered the most productive petroleum fields of Butler, Forest, Warren, McKean and Allegheny Counties. The famous Mathews well was drilled and most of the phenomenal McDonald field owned by him and a few others. His operations expanded until he became the largest oil producer and operator in the States, and also the owner of highly valuable coal mines in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and of gold and silver works in Colorado and Idaho. He is President of the Trade Dollar Mining and Milling Company of Silver City, Idaho, and the new town of Guffey, thirty miles from Cripple Creek, has been named in his honor. Politically he is a Democrat, and in 1897 was chosen by the State Convention of his party as the Pennsylvania member of the Democratic National Committee. On July 23, 1866, he was honorably discharged from the volunteer naval service and the same day commissioned as Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps. In September, 1869, he resigned his commission. Several years ago a bill was before Congress, which had been reported favorably by the Committee on Naval Affairs, to place Mr. Hamersly on the retired list as Captain in the Marine Corps, to which the then Secretary of the Navy attached the following remarks: "With reference to the request of the committee for an expression of the views of this department on the merits of the bill under consideration, I have the honor to state that, in view of the fact that the information contained in the inclosures of this communication show an enviable record of active service on the part of this gentleman during the late war in the volunteer navy, a commendable record subsequent thereto as a commissioned officer in the Marine Corps, until he was stricken down in the line of duty on board the ship to which he was attached, in a foreign port, condemned by a duly organized board of survey, consisting of medical officers of the navy, and transferred to the Naval Hospital at Norfolk, Va., for treatment for the disease with which he was suffering, and which he contracted in the line of duty, as before stated, it would seem to be unnecessary for an expression by this department of its views as to the merits of the bill further than to suggest that had Mr. Hamersly been retired at a time when he could have been retired justly and lawfully under the existing law, he would have been placed upon the retired list of the Marine Corps, with the rank of Second Lieutenant, which rank he then held. (Signed) B. F. Tracy, Secretary of the Navy." In 1870, a few months after his resignation from the Marine Corps, Mr. Hamersly compiled the first edition of his "Records of Living Officers of the United States Navy," a work which met with such success that in 1871 a second edition was called for, and since that date five other editions, the last in 1902, have been published. In 1881 Mr. Hamersly published "Hamersly's Naval Encyclopædia." In 1879 he started the United Service Magazine, of which he has continued to be the editor and publisher for twenty years, the magazine being now conducted by his son. While a Lieutenant in the Marine Corps stationed at the Norfolk Navy Yard, he married, in 1868, Miss Mary Palmer, of Portsmouth, Va. They have four children—one son, L. R. Hamersly, Jr., and three daughters, one the wife of Lieutenant Roland Curtin, of the Navy; one married to R. R. Roosevelt, Jr., of New York City, and the youngest the wife of Paymaster H. E. Biscoe, United States Navy. Mr. Hamersly is a member of the Pennsylvania Commandery of the Loyal Legion, and of the Army and Navy Club, of New York. Office, 49 Wall St., New York.

HAMILTON, Samuel, A. M., Ph. D.:

Educator; Supt. of Public Schools of Allegheny County, Pa.; born in Washington County, Pa., June 30, 1856; his father, Samuel Hamilton, was born in Washington County, Pa., in 1807, and being a man of fine literary tastes, he traveled extensively in Europe, where he married Mary, daughter of Kairns Patterson, of Donegal, Ireland; on his return to America he settled on a farm in Washington County, where eight children were born to them, the fourth son being Samuel. After the death of his father he worked for the farmers of the neighborhood in the summer and attended the district school in the winter; at the age of seventeen years he taught in the same school where he had been a pupil; while engaged in teaching he studied under a tutor, and during vacation attended the academy at New Texas; later he completed a course at the Laird Institute, a classical school located at Murraysville, Pa.; in this school he assisted as a teacher while carrying on his studies as a student; he also spent some time at the Oakdale Academy. In 1878 he was elected principal of the schools of Chartiers Borough, in Allegheny County, now known as Carnegie, which position he filled for three years, when he accepted the principalship of the Braddock schools, where he now resides. While teaching he read law with James McF. Carpenter of Pittsburg, but before he was ready for admission to the bar he was appointed, in September, 1886, to the office of County Superintendent of Public Schools of Allegheny County, Pa., to which office he was elected the next spring; he has since been re-elected five times, and is now serving his sixth term. His written reports to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the more elaborate report which he annually publishes in book form, are critically studied by the leading educators. In 1886 he organized the Allegheny County Directors' Association, which is now one of the branches of the Pennsylvania Educational Association, the successor of the Pennsylvania State Teachers' Association, of which Superintendent Hamilton was the President in 1893-1894. In connection with his editorial work he pursued a course of study under the direction of the faculty of Grove City College and received the degree of Ph. D. from that institution. In 1883 the great steel manufacturer, Andrew Carnegie, gave Principal Hamilton the sum of $500 for the library of the public schools at Braddock; this is said to be the initial act of that phase of philanthropy to which Mr. Carnegie has since given many millions; for many years he was a Director of the Masonic Hall Association and a member of the Board of Managers of the Carnegie Library; he is a Director of the State Bank at Braddock; he served in the City Council six years, and was for three years its President. Member of the Calvary Presbyterian Church, of which he is an elder; member of Braddock's Field Lodge No. 510; Shiloh Chapter, No. 257; Gorgas Lodge of Perfection; Pittsburg Chapter Rose Croix; Pittsburg Council Princes of Jerusalem; Tancred Commandery No. 48, Knights Templar; Pennsylvania Consistery, S. P. R. S. In 1902 he was crowned an honorary member of the Supreme Council of the thirty-third and last degree of the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States. June 2, 1886, he married Minnie M., the only child of John and Sarah E. McCune of Braddock; of this union one son, Paul Holland Hamilton, was born. Mrs. Hamilton died May 9, 1887, and Mr. Hamilton married again June 1, 1898; his second wife was Mary R., the daughter of John and Mary Kennedy of New Brighton, Pa.; to them has been born one daughter, Elizabeth Hamilton. Address, Braddock, Pa.

HAMLIN, Byron D.:

Lawyer and Senator; born in Shesheguim, Bradford County, Pa., May 7, 1824. His father, Dr. Asa Hamlin, dying when Byron was but eleven years old, he had to go actively to work to aid in the family support, beginning by peeling bark from fallen hemlock trees and selling it as fuel. At thirteen he became mail carrier between Smethport, Pa., and Olean, N. Y., a distance of fifty-six miles, which he made twice a week on a mule. Gaining some little education by home study, he began to teach a district school at the age of sixteen, afterward spent a year and a half in Allegheny College, and then began the study of law under his elder brother, Orlo J. Hamlin, who was twenty years his senior, and had won eminence in the law. Becoming a partner of his brother after admission to practice, he made a diligent study of land law and land titles, and in time became the owner of some large tracts of timber and oil lands, which eventually proved very valuable to him. An energetic Democrat, he was nominated for the Legislature in 1848, but declined. In 1852 he was elected to the State Senate, and, though one of the youngest member, was elected its presiding officer in 1854. He was defeated in the succeeding election. In 1868 declined a nomination for President Judge, and in 1882 was induced to accept a nomination for the Legislature, but was defeated, his party being then largely in the minority. Address, Smethport, Pa.

HAMMETT, Frederick W.:

President and constructor of street railways; born in Phiadelphia, July 14, 1859; his father, Barnabas Hammett, was a pioneer in the Pennsylvania coal business, his firm, Noble, Hammett & Co., being the largest coal shipping concern of its day; Asa Parker was its junior member, and was aided by it to construct the Lehigh Valley Railroad from Mauch Chunk to Bethlehem. After a preliminary education in academies, Mr. Hammett entered the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania and practiced law in Philadelphia for two years after his graduation in 1881. At the same time he engaged in mining enterprises, and was Treasurer from 1881 to 1885 of the Cohoba Coal and Coke Company, the first coal mining company in Alabama; he founded the oil mining firm of L. McDonald & Co. in 1883, and after its absorption by the Aetna Oil Company in 1885 became President of the latter; in 1890 this was consolidated with several other oil companies, Mr. Hammett becoming Treasurer of the combination, a position which he still holds; in 1899-1900 he constructed the Philadelphia, Morton and Swarthmore Street Railway and became its President, and in 1901 was elected President of the Media, Middleton, Aston and Chester Electric Railway Company, which he likewise constructed. He is officially connected with a number of other corporations, and is a member of the Union League and the Manufacturers' Club of Philadelphia. He married Martha Q. Lane in 1883 and has three children, two sons and a daughter. Address, 2106 Tioga St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Literary critic for the Outlook. Contributor of fiction and essays to the magazines. Address, Haverford College, Pa.

HANCOCK, Elisha A.:

Soldier and merchant; born near Wilkesbarre, Pa., in 1839; spent his early years at farm work, attending school during the winter; entered a Wilkesbarre machine shop as an apprentice at fifteen, and worked at his trade of machinist until 1861, when he enlisted in a company at Wilkesbarre to take part in the war. The services of this company, when first offered, were declined, but were accepted in the new call for troops after the battle of Bull Run, Mr. Hancock becoming First Lieutenant of Company H, Ninth Pennsylvania Cavalry. He served in the army until the end of the war, rising to the rank of Major, and taking part in more than fifty engagements. He was with Sherman in his march to the sea, and through the Carolinas, and lost his left leg as the result of a wound received near the end of the war. Major Hancock was many times highly commended for gallantry and for the able and efficient discharge of his duties. Unable, on account of his wound, to return to his trade, he opened a mining supply store in 1866, at Plains, Pa., and in 1875 engaged with his brother in the grain shipping trade at Wilkesbarre. The business of the firm grew gradually and steadily until it became one of the largest in its line in the United States, being removed to Philadelphia as a better centre of receipt and distribution. Four years after moving to Philadelphia, Mr. Hancock was elected President of the Commercial Exchange, and when Governor Hoyt took his chair he appointed him Quartermaster General of the State, with the rank of Colonel. While in Wilkesbarre Major Hancock was a Director of the People's Bank, and in Philadelphia he aided in founding and became a Director of the Fourth Street National Bank. He was also for several years a Director of the Pennsylvania and New York Canal and Railroad Company. He is a member of the Loyal Legion, Rittenhouse and Country Clubs, the Grand Army of the Republic, and several clubs, and has served as Director and Vice President of the Union League. Address, 2107 Spruce St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HANCOCK, James D.:

Lawyer; born in the Wyoming Valley, Pa., June 9, 1837; spent his boyhood on a farm until sixteen, when his family removed to Wilkesbarre. There his education was continued, and was completed at Kenyon College, Ohio, where he graduated in 1859; in 1900 the degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by Kenyon College, his alma mater. After two years of teaching in the Western University of Pennsylvania, he began the study of law, and was admitted to the bar of Pittsburg in 1861. Here he practiced for four years, and then removed to Franklin, Pa., where he built up a large practice, becoming in 1877 solicitor of the Allegheny Valley Railroad Company, and of the Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia Railroad Company in 1878, being made general solicitor of the latter in 1887. He resigned in 1890. He was nominated by the Democratic Party for Congress in 1892, and for Congressman-at-large in 1894. In 1871 Gov. Hoyt appointed him Trustee of the Insane Hospital at Warren, which position he held for thirteen years. He was nominated for Elector-at-large in 1896, but declined on account of objections to the party platform. In 1879 the Seneca Indians of the Allegheny River adopted him as a member of their nation, giving him the name of "Nya-Gua-Hai," or "Grizzly Bear." Mr. Hancock is a member of several reform and other societies. Address, Franklin, Pa.

HAND, Alfred:

Jurist; born at Honesdale, Pa., March 26, 1835; was graduated at Yale College in 1857. He then entered upon the study of law at Montrose, Pa., and was admitted to the bar of that place in 1859. In 1860 he opened an office at Scranton, Pa., entering a law firm entitled Jessups & Hand, which soon had an active and profitable business. In 1866 he entered into partnership with Isaac J. Post, which continued until 1879, when Mr. Hand was appointed by Gov. Hoyt a Judge in the Eleventh Judicial District. He was elected Judge in 1880 for a ten years' term, and in 1888, while serving as President Judge, he was appointed by Gov. Beaver Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, to fill a vacancy. He retired from the bench in 1889, since which time he has been engaged in law practice, largely as counsel for important corporations. He was President of the Third National Bank from 1872 to 1879, and has been active in charitable institutions, being President of the Oral School for Deaf Mutes, at Scranton, and actively connected with other institutions. He has been President of the Scranton Free Library since its foundation. Address, Scranton, Pa.

Manufacturer; born in Philadelphia, Sept. 12, 1848; began his business career at the age of fourteen as a mill boy, in which aptness and industry gained him advancement till he was given charge of the hosiery department. In 1874 he began the hosiery manufacture for himself, with a fellow workman, George R. Jesson; opening in a single room, they occupied three rooms at the end of a year, and in 1876 their fast growing business rendered it necessary to erect a five-story factory building, which needed to be increased in 1881. Mr. Jesson soon after withdrew, leaving Mr. Hanifen sole proprietor. He introduced new machinery and began the manufacture of jersey and knit cloths. The demand for the latter grew so great that in time the whole factory was devoted to the making of knit cloths. Samples of these were exhibited at the New Orleans Exposition of 1884 and afterward placed in the National Museum at Washington. The manufacture of underwear has since been added. He served the city in the Common Council 1883-1887, and in the Select Council, 1887-1896, rendering efficient service as a member of important committees. He is a Director of the Kensington National Bank, and of the Johnston Frog and Switch Company, of Chester, Pa., and a member of the Union League, the Philadelphia Bourse, and other associations. HARRISON, Charles Custis:

Provost of the University of Pennsylvania; born in Philadelphia, May 3, 1844, a descendant of Thomas Harrison, of Carlisle, England, who visited America before the Revolution and there espoused the cause of the Colonies at the cost of the sacrifice of his English estate. His son established the first chemical manufactory in America and this was carried on by his uncles under the firm name of Harrison Brothers. On his mother's side he is descended from the famous Custis family, of Virginia, whose name he bears. He was educated in the Episcopal Academy and the University of Pennsylvania, and intended to make the law his profession, but during his absence on a visit to the army in 1862, with the purpose of joining its ranks, the late John Welsh proposed to his father to establish their two sons, with Walter S. Newhall, in the sugar-refining business, under the firm name of Harrison, Newhall & Welsh. Young Harrison, then only nineteen, on his return home, found his warlike aspirations checked, and entered actively into the business formed for him, which quickly showed signs of prosperity. His brothers and brother-in-law subsequently entered the firm, which became known as Harrison, Frazier & Co., and later as the Franklin Sugar Refining Company. In 1892, when the refinery was sold, it was doing the largest business in value of products of any manufactory in Pennsylvania. Mr. Harrison attended to its mercantile interests, and in doing so traveled widely through the United States and Mexico. Aside from his business relations he was an active member of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, and took great interest in the Episcopal Hospital, and also in the Society for the Protection of Children from Cruelty, of which he is the President. He was elected a Trustee of the University of Pennsylvania in 1876, and on the death of John Welsh succeeded him as Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. In 1894, on resignation of the highly efficient Provost Pepper, Mr. Harrison was requested to accept this office. He declined, but was finally induced to accept it for a brief interval and after a year's experience consented in June, 1895, to be installed as Provost. A few days previously he had established, in honor of his father, "The George L. Harrison foundation for the encouragement of liberal studies and the advancement of knowledge," endowing it with $500,000. Its purpose was to establish scholarships and fellowships for men of exceptional ability, increase the library, and aid professors to devote themselves to special work. The new Provost sought diligently to add to the resources and develop the capabilities of the university, a striking result of his labors being the building of the dormitories, at a cost of $600,000, and of Houston Hall, as a college club house of $160,000—this money being obtained in the form of gifts from liberal patrons of the institution. This is but a portion of the funds raised during the administration of Provost Harrison, these having amounted to over $6,000,000, which have been applied greatly to the advantage and development of the university. Mr. Harrison is a member of the Pennsylania Academy of the Fine Arts, the American Philosophical Society, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the Phi Beta Kappa Society and the University Club. He married on Feb. 23, 1870, Ellen Nixon Waln, their family consisting of three sons and three daughters. Address, 400 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HERZOG, George:

Decorative artist; born and educated in Munich, Bavaria; opened studio in Philadelphia, 1873, and continued in that field ever since. His exhibits at the Centennial Exposition gained him two medals, one from the judges of group seven, and the other from group twenty-seven, which embodied plastic and graphic art. From that time on he rapidly advanced until he became one of the best known decorators in the United States and won an international reputation. He is well informed upon the traditions of art and architecture and possesses not only the skill to illustrate his ideas rapidly by pencil, but also to elaborate them with more carefully executed designs, which oftentimes rival in delicacy miniature paintings. Some of his best work is found in the Supreme Court rooms, City Hall, and the Masonic Temple, Philadelphia, showing as it does his knowledge of historical and allegorical subjects and great skill in representation, the purely decorative features so harmonizing with the pictorial as to justify their being classed among the very finest examples of decorative art. Among the many private residences decorated by him those of John H. Converse, Thomas Dolan, Charles J. Harrah, Edwin H. Fitler, P. A. B. Widener, William L. Elkins, and James Elverson ought to be mentioned. In all of his works he is most particular to have his motif in exact accord with the style and character of the building, as is exemplified, in a remarkable degree, in the now famous Egyptian and Corinthian Halls, Masonic Temple, Philadelphia, the finest structure of its kind in the world. Address, 3305 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HICKS, Thomas L.:

Ex-Postmaster; he was born in Philadelphia, Feb. 18, 1852, where he was educated in the public schools and afterward worked with his father in the plumbing business. In 1877 he was made receiver for the West Philadelphia Passenger Railway Company, and in 1881 Secretary and Superintendent of the Fifth Street Market Company. He early became interested in Republican party affairs, and in 1877 was elected to the Common Council of the city, being returned at every election until 1895, when he resigned to accept the post of Chief of the Bureau of Highways, under the Director of Public Works. In this position he proved a very efficient public servant, making radical changes in the management of the bureau and bringing it from a state of disorder and confusion to that of a smooth running branch of the city administration. Having proved his ability as an organizer in this field of labor, he was in 1897 appointed Postmaster of the City of Philadelphia, holding this responsible position until 1901 and giving great public satisfaction by his efficient management. Mr. Hicks is a member of the prominent Republican organizations of Philadelphia. Address, Sixty-fifth St. and Girard Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

HODGE, George Woolsey:

Rector in the Protestant Episcopal Church; born in Philadelphia, May 20, 1845, the son of Dr. Hugh. L. Hodge, who for many years was a professor in the Medical Department of the University of Pennsylvania. His grandfather, Dr. Hugh Hodge, was a surgeon in the Revolution, and his great-grandfather, Andrew Hodge an early merchant of Philadelphia. Receiving his early education in private schools, he entered the Arts Department of the University of Pennsylvania in 1861, graduating with honor in 1865. He received a prize for the best English essay and was orator of his class. Choosing the career of the ministry, he entered the Philadelphia Episcopal Divinity School, from which he graduated in 1868, following his studies with a year's travel abroad, and being ordained deacon in 1869. His life work began the same year, as assistant minister of the famous old Christ Church on Seventh Street above Market. His connection with this parish continued for two years. During three years of this period he had charge of Calvary Church, which was attached to Christ Church, and he afterward raised money to build the present Christ Church Chapel, on Pine near 19th Street, where he collected a new congregation of over two hundred communicants. In the autumn of 1880 he was made rector of the Church of the Ascension, then with a quite small congregation, but which prospered greatly under his pastoral care, its membership and resources being much enhanced. The original church on Lombard Street was sold in 1885 and a parish building erected on Broad Street below South, where afterward the present church edifice was erected. Dr. Hodge continues connected with it as rector. He has been very active in ecclesiastical service, especially in favor of religious unity. He then entered Jefferson Medical College, where he was graduated in 1887. His interest was especially given to surgery, and after graduating he was, by competitive examination, appointed resident physician of the Jefferson Medical Hospital. He subsequently entered upon general practice, and soon after was appointed Police Surgeon of the Seventh District, a year later being made Assistant Chief Surgeon of the Philadelphia Police and Fire Department. In 1895 he, with Dr. T. H. Andrews, organized the Medical Emergency Corps, composed of district police surgeons, its purpose being to render all possible assistance in case of injury at fires and elsewhere. This corps, which is under Dr. Hulsizer's command and was the first of its kind in this country, has proved to be highly efficient and useful in its operations. In addition to his labors in these fields he has been appointed Assistant Medical Inspector of the Board of Health. He is a member of several medical societies and of the Pen and Pencil Club. Address, 225 Brown St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HUMES, William P.:

Banker; born in Bellefonte, Pa., Sept. 21, 1844; son of the late prominent, efficient and reputed to be at the time of his death (March 28, 1895, being in the eighty-fifth year of his age) the oldest bank President in the United States, Edward C. Humes, of Bellefonte, Pa. He was educated at the Bellefonte Academy; afterward at the Pennsylvania State College, then known as the Farmers' High School (later as Agricultural College of Pennsylvania), from where he was called to his home during the early part of the Civil War, to assist his father in his varied business interests, taking an active part in the banking interests of his native place in connection with the First National Bank, and the successful banking firm established previously by his father of Humes, McAllister, Hale & Co., composed of Edward C. Humes, H. N. McAllister, a prominent lawyer; Judge James T. Hale, also a leading lawyer and member of Congress, and Andrew G. Curtin, the great war Governor of Pennsylvania, and which was after a number of years merged into the former (First National Bank of Bellefonte), of which his father was also President until his death. In addition to his financial interests Mr. Humes became more generally known to the public as a candidate for position of United States Commissioner of Railroads, to succeed Gen. Wade Hampton of South Carolina. He was supported in his application by nearly all the Republican leaders of Pennsylvania, by the United States Senators, and several Judges of the higher courts of the State; by the Governor, the Mayor and former Mayor of Philadelphia, and indorsed in private letters from leaders of both political parties throughout the State, as well as from personal friends of the President of his own State of Ohio. While there were other applicants from several Statse, Mr. Humes' strongest competitor was General Longstreet of Georgia, who, as a prominent Southern supporter of the Union and the Administration, was finally appointed to the place by President McKinley. His time is still actively and almost continuously with the bank, as well as in giving attention to his father's estate. He is a Director of the bank, and, with his sister, Miss Mira, and his father's estate, are its largest stockholders. He is an elder of the Presbyterian Church of Bellefonte, with which his father and grandfather (Hamilton Humes) bore the same connection. The family from its earliest history have been closely identified with church, charitable and missionary work, always interested in the best general welfare of the community and their friends, and have been favored with the highest social standing. Politically he is a Republican, and, while loyal to party interests, respects those who may differ with him in their political faith or views. He has also been for many years an active member of the Union League of Philadelphia, and belongs to various other organizations. Address, Bellefonte, Pa.

HUTCHINSON, Joseph Baldwin:

General Manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad system east of Pittsburg and Erie; was born at Bristol, Pennsylvania, March 20, 1844. His father, Joseph B. Hutchinson, was a native of Bristol, Pa., and his mother, Miss Selina Knapp, of Arlington, Vermont. He received his early education at the hands of a private tutor, who fitted him for entrance to the Polytechnic College of Pennsylvania. He graduated from this institution in 1861, and, in order to perfect himself in the knowledge of machinery and applied mechanics, entered the Delamater Iron Works, of New York, in the spring of 1862. He continued there until the fall of the same year, when he passed an examination by the Board of Inspection of New York City, and received a certificate as Third Assistant Engineer. Upon receipt of this certificate, he at once entered the service of Messrs. Hargous & Co. as Third Assistant Engineer on one of their steamers plying between New York and Havana, in which capacity he continued until the steamer was sold to the United States Government in the early part of 1863. In June, 1863, he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company as rodman, in the construction corps, on the Miffin and Centre County Railroad. Two weeks later he secured leave of absence from the President to enter the army. He served through the Gettysburg campaign, and was honorably discharged in September, 1863, when he resumed his duties in the service of the railroad as rodman, in the construction corps, on the Western Pennsylvania Road. In August, 1864, he was advanced to the position of Assistant Engineer of that road, and in May, 1865, to the position of Assistant Engineer of Maintenance of Way and Construction. From March, 1868, until July, 1870, he was consecutively Assistant Engineer of the Columbia and Port Deposit Railroad and the Butler Extension and Columbia Bridge; in July, 1870, he was appointed Principal Assistant Engineer of the Columbia and Port Deposit Railroad, and on July 1, 1877, he was made Assistant Superintendent of the road. Address, 1225 North Tenth St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Lawyer; born Feb. 17, 1840, and after a thorough training in the best schools of this country, completed his education at the University of Heidelberg, Germany. Before entering that world-renowned institution, however, he went to South American with the United States expedition against Paraguay, visiting the islands of St. Thomas and Barbadoes in the West Indies and the principal cities of the east coast of South America, and, sailing a thousand miles up the Parana Rivera to Asuncion; was present at the capitulation of Lopez, which crowned the success of the expedition. After a sojourn of several years in Europe, he returned to America and entered the law office of his father as a student, and, having been thoroughly qualified, was admitted to the bar of Berks County, April 14, 1863. He was subsequently admitted to the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth and to the bar of Philadelphia and other counties of the State. He has recently been appointed by the Bar Association of Pennsylvania Chairman of a committee to revise the corporation laws of the State. He is general counsel for the United Power and Transportation Company and the Interstate Railway Company, corporations controlling over five hundred miles of street railways in Pennsylvania and the adjoining States. It was mainly through his efforts that the city of Reading recovered title to the tract of land, lost for nearly a hundred years, at the foot of Penn's Mount, now beautifully improved as the city park and known as Penn Common; and that the free library of the city, of which he is President, was rescued from obscurity and sacrifice, placed upon an enduring foundation by liberal private contributions headed with his name, and then adopted by the public as worthy of maintenance out of the common purse. In 1862, on the invasion of Maryland by the Confederate Army, Mr. Jones enlisted as a private soldier, and was present at the battle of Antietam, and in 1863 he was made Captain of a company of Pennsylvania Volunteers. In 1866 he was elected a member of the Legislature from the county of Berks, and was twice re-elected, and in 1868, his second term, he received his party's nomination for the Speakership. Mr. Jones is a vestryman of Christ (Episcopal) Church, Reading, and a Director in many local organizations. He is also a member of the Colonial Society of Pennsylvania, Society of Colonial Wars, Sons of the Revolution, Society of the War of 1812, and Grand Army of the Republic. Mr. Jones is descended from a long line of distinguished colonial and Revolutionary ancestors on both sides of his house. His father, J. Glancy Jones, was an able lawyer and distinguished member of Congress from Berks County from 1850 to 1859, during his last term having been Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. He resigned his seat in Congress to accept the appointment of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Austria, which office he held during the trying times of the commencement of the Civil War, when our relations with foreign countries were extremely delicate. Mr. Jones's great-grandfather, Col. Jonathan Jones, was Senior Captain of the first regiment raised in Pennsylvania for the Continental Army, October, 1775. He participated in the winter campaign for the relief of the army at Quebec, after the death of Montgomery, and also in many important engagements. For distinguished services he was promoted to the rank of Major, and later to that of Lieutenant Colonel in the Pennsylvania Line. Mr. Jones's great-great-grandfather, David Jones, came from Merioneth, Wales, to Pennsylvania in 1721 and bought a large tract of land in Caernarvon Township, where he opened and developed iron ore mines, which still bear his name. Mr. Jones's mother was the daughter of William Rodman, of Bucks County, who was a Brigade Quartermaster in the Army of the Revolution, and afterward a member of the Senate of Pennsylvania and of the Twelfth Congress of the United States. The Rodman family is one of the oldest in the New World, having settled in America in the early part of the seventeenth century, and contributed to the colonies many of their most distinguished citizens. On Nov. 26, 1870, Mr. Jones married Margaret Ellen McCarty, daughter of James McCarty, a prominent ironmaster of Reading, and Rebecca MacVeagh, his wife. He has one daughter, who is the wife of Nathaniel Ferguson, of Reading. Address, Reading, Pa.

JONES, Woodrufff:

Chemical manufacturer; born in Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 7, 1843; grandson of Aquilla Jones, a Philadelphia merchant in the East India trade. He was educated in several Philadelphia schools, obtaining his higher education in the University of Pennsylvania, where he was graduated from the Department of Arts in 1860. He then took a position with Crew, Rogers & Crew, manufacturing chemists, at the same time attending lectures in the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy. During the war he was Second Lieutenant in the First Philadelphia Battery, and served through the Antietam and Gettysburg campaigns. Subsequently he engaged in the manufacture of chemical and pharmaceutical preparations until 1878, when he entered the white lead, oil and color factory of John T. Lewis & Bro., of which company he became Secretary and Treasurer on its incorporation in 1889. These positions he still retains. Mr. Jones was one of the founders of the Science and Art Club of Germantown. Address, 5303 Germantown Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

Special attention of the Navy Department was called to the subject in his reports as Chief of Bureau, 1871-1872, and overwhelming proof was produced in his report on "European Ships of War," 1878; also in his work, "The War Ships and Navies of the World." These publications, together with his descriptions of the various new types of foreign war ships and casements on our obsolete types of wooden vessels, had influence in showing the necessity of building a new fleet of modern ships commensurate with the wealth, extent and dignity of the country, and of types having no superiors in speed or power of offence and defence. KRAUSKOPF, Joseph:

Rabbi, lecturer and author; born in Ostrow, Prussia, on the 21st of January, 1858; was educated in religious and secular branches, in the schools of his native place. Came to the United States in July, 1872, and became clerk in a tea store, in Fall River, Mass. Graduated from University of Cincinnati, and as Rabbi from the Hebrew Union College, in 1883, the latter conferring upon him the degree of D. D., in 1885. While a student, he and H. Berkowitz published "The First and Second Hebrew Readers," and "Bible Ethics." Some time before his graduation he received a call to the pulpit of the B'nai Yehudah Congregation, in Kansas City, Mo. Life member of the Board of National Charities and Corrections; in 1885 Vice President of the famous Pittsburg Conference. In 1887 Dr. Krauskopf accepted a call to the Reform Congregation of Keneseth Israel, of Philadelphia. Seventeen volumes of his lectures have been published in book form since 1888, They embrace every topic in the field of religion, ethics and social science. He was the chief promoter of the Jewish Publication Society of America, which has become a powerful factor in the development of American Judaism. Dr. Krauskopf leads a number of classes, and is heard on the lecture platform in all parts of the United States. Author of "A Rabbi's Impressions of the Oberammergau Passion Play," (1901). In 1894 Dr. Krauskopf resolved to visit Russia, to appeal to the Russian Government for the Russian Jew, and suggest as a means of relieving the congested population of the Russian Pale their colonization as agriculturists in the interior of Russia, toward which the Jews of the world might extend support. Upon applying for the necessary visé endorsement of his passport it was denied, since, as a foreign Jew, he could not be admitted into Russia. The reply to the Secretary of State for permission was, "Russian Government deeply regrets its inability to accede to the request in behalf of the Reverend Jewish Divine." Bills were introduced into Congress to the effect that if an American citizen is refused entrance into Russia by reason of his faith, the treaty of the two countries should be considered abrogated. During this agitation he left for Russia. Unmolested, he traversed the entire country of Russia and made a thorough study of the condition of the Jews in the Pale settlements and of the agricultural colonies in the interior, concerning which he made a report to the late Baron de Hirsch for use at a conference at Geneva, which was not held owing to the death of Baron de Hirsch. Being impressed with the excellence of the Jewish Agricultural School at Odessa, and Count Tolstoi's arguments in favor of such institutions, upon his return he set to work to found the National Farm School, raising sufficient means to buy a farm at Doylestown, Pa., near Philadelphia, erect buildings, and start the school in 1897. He is its President. Its object is training of boys for practical and scientific agricultural careers and fitting them for superintendents of colonies, to be organized among the unemployed or debilitated poor of overcroweded cities. It is non-sectarian. In 1898 he was chosen one of the three Special field Commissioners. His report of observations made and relief rendered in the American camp and in the Cuban battlefields, forms part of the most interesting heroic records of the late Spanish-American War. KULP, Monroe H.:

Business manager; born in Barto, in Berks County, Pa., Oct. 23, 1858. When he was nine years of age his parents removed to Shamokin, Pa., where his father engaged in the lumber business, in which the son followed after a period of work in the collieries. Feeling the need of a better education as he grew older, he entered the State Normal College at Lebanon, Ohio, and afterward a business college in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he graduated in 1881. He then became bookkeeper and cashier for the firm of which his father was head, and when the firm dissolved, in 1886, he became manager of the large lumber interests of his father. In 1895 he organized the firm of Monroe H. Kulp & Co., adding general construction to the lumber business. On finding the timber supply rapidly decreasing, he obtained control of about 25,000 acres of forest land in 1897, and organized the Lewisburg & Buffalo Valley Railroad Company, of which he became President and General Manager. Mr. Kulp entered into other business relations, becoming President of the North and West Branch Telephone Company, and a Director in a number of industrial concerns. Among his enterprises was the purchase, from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, of about eighty-seven acres of land near Shamokin, on which he laid out the two suburbs of Fairview and Edgewood. Mr. Kulp is politically an earnest Republican, and in 1890, at the solicitation of his friends, consented to become a candidate for the Legislature. For reasons connected with the interest of the party, he subsequently withdrew, and was rewarded in 1894 with the nomination and election to Congress, to which he was re-elected in 1896. As a member of the House Mr. Kulp served on several important committees, considering the interests of his constituents without regard to party affiliation. Address, Shamokin, Pa.

LEE, James W.:

Lawyer; was admitted to the bar in 1869, at Franklin, Venango County, Pa., one of the original oil counties. Mr. Lee soon after formed a partnership with Mr. S. C. T. Dodd. In 1875 Mr. Dodd left the firm to become leading counsel of the Standard Oil Company. In 1879 Mr. Lee was elected to the State Senate of Pennsylvania, where he remained eight years, making a hard fight against the rebate system on the railroads and in favor of a free pipe-line bill. It was largely through his efforts that the latter was passed in 1883. Aroused by the hard conditions of the oil producing element, Mr. Lee in 1887 became active in the Producers' Protective Association. It was he who planned the agreement for the shut-down that year, and it was he who later was chiefly instrumental in bringing so large a number of oil men into the independent concerns. He was the first President of the Producers' Oil Company and of the Producers and Refiners' Company, and from 1897 to 1901 was President of the Pure Oil Company. Mr. Lee acts now as the chief counsel of the united companies. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

In addition to the important legal practice which Mr. Lewis has enjoyed, he has given a great part of his time to the fostering and developing of business and industrial enterprises. Among these is the Wilkesbarre Electric Light Company, of which he was one of the organizers. His most important work in this direction has been the consolidation of the street railways of Wilkesbarre and vicinity into the Wilkesbarre and Wyoming Valley Traction Company, of which he was one of the original Directors. This system brings into one a series of ten or more separate railways, with more than sixty miles of trackage. In addition, Mr. Lewis organized and is President of the Mt. Vernon Coal Company, and is a Director in the Colorado Marble and Slate Companies and the Elk Mountain Railway Company of Colorado. Address, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

LIT, Samuel:

Merchant; born about fifty years ago; educated in Philadelphia and engaged in business in a very modest way, in time opening a store in which the activity of himself and brother built up a profitable business. Their marked energy and ability attracted the attention of capitalists, and they were engaged as managers of a large department store opened by some wealthy bankers at the northeast corner of Eighth and Market Streets. This concern, catering for a line of trade not met by the other department stores, that of the poorer classes, has been phenomenally successful, and shortly before 1900 began to expand, continuing until it extended along Market nearly to Seventh Street and along Eighth to Filbert Street. It at present has a very large floor space and does an immense business. Address, Eighth and Market Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

LITTLE, Amos R.:

Dry goods merchant; born in Marshfield, Mass., July 27, 1825; grandson of Commodore George Little, who served in the Navy during the Revolution, and commanded the Boston during the brief naval war with France. With little advantages of education, the youth, at nineteen, left his home and journeyed to Philadelphia, anxious to exchange his life on the farm for a mercantile career. He first found employment in a country store at Milestown, Pa., but after a year obtained employment in the wholesale house of Maynard & Haltun at a considerable advance in salary. In 1849 he married the daughter of George Peterson, a retired merchant, and in the following year embarked in business for himself in the dry goods commission trade, under the firm name of Little & Peterson. The business prospered, several changes taking place in the firm title, it becoming successively Withers, Little & Peterson, Little & Stokes, Little, Stokes & Co., and finally, in 1866, Amos R. Little & Co. In 1883 Mr. Little retired from business with an ample competence, and made, with his wife, a three years' tour of the world. Mr. Little was active on the Financial Board of the Centennial Exposition, and has since been connected with some of the most prominent corporations and institutions of Philadelphia. Address, 946 Drexel Building; residence, The Aldine Hotel, Philadelphia.

LITTLE Ralph B.:

District Attorney; born in Montrose, Pa., Nov. 8, 1865; son of George P. Little, a prominent lawyer, and grandson of Ralph B. Little, for many years one of the ablest attorneys of the Susquehanna County bar. Educated in Keystone Academy and Bucknell University, he left the latter in 1885 without graduating to take up the study of law with his father. He was admitted to the bar in 1889, and has won his way to the front rank of the younger attorneys by legal talent, energy and application. In 1898 he was elected District Attorney of Susquehanna County, and was re-elected in 1902. He has been Chairman of the Republican County Committee since 1899. Address, Montrose, Pa.

LITTLE, Robert R.:

Jurist; born in Berwick, Columbia County, Pa., May 30, 1852. His father, a successful lawyer of New York State, settled early at Berwick, and conducted a successful practice at Bloomsburg, where he died in 1900. His great grandfather, Ephraim Little, was a naval Captain in the Revolutionary War. Mr. Little was graduated in 1871 from the Bloomsburg State Normal School, and afterward studied in Rochester University and Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y. He studied law in his father's office at Bloomsburg, was admitted to the Columbia County bar in 1874 and practiced in partnership with his father, under the firm name of E. H. & R. R. Little till the retirement of his father in 1885. They built up an extensive practice, Mr. Little gaining much reputation as a skillful trial lawyer. In the election of November, 1898, he was elected to the bench of the Common Pleas Court on the Democratic ticket. He had previously—1876-1882—served two terms as District Attorney. He also served three terms in the Bloomsburg School Board, and is a Trustee of the State Normal School. Address, Bloomsburg, Pa.

LOCKHART, Charles:

Oil producer; born at Cairns Heads, near Whitford, in Wightownshire, Scotland, Aug. 2, 1818. Early in 1836 his parents came to America, and, on their arrival, they went directly to Pittsburg. He found employment with James McCully, with whom he remained for nineteen years, and, in 1855, became one of the firm of James McCully & Co. The firm remained in business until 1865, when it dissolved. It was as a clerk in the store of Mr. McCully that Mr. Lockhart made his first venture in the oil business. His first purchase was of three barrels, in 1852, from Isaac Huff, who was the part owner in a salt well in Westmoreland County. Disposing of this oil at a profit, he purchased a controlling interest in the salt well, and from that time, April, 1853, he has been an oil producer. After Colonel Drake's discovery in 1859, at Oil Creek, Mr. Lockhart sent a representative to investigate the field, and the report being favorable, a company was organized under the name of Phillips, Frew & Co., Mr. Lockhart being a member of the firm. In May, 1860, Mr. Lockhart went to Europe with samples of crude and refined oil and was the first person to bring the attention of the commercial world of Europe to the value of this to them unknown product, and the result has been of incalculable value to the oil producers of this country. Upon the organization of the Standard Oil Company, in 1874, all of the refineries with which Mr. Lockhart was connected were merged into that great corporation. Since then he has been identified with the various companies in which the Standard Company is interested; also many other interests, covering a wide field. He is a Director in the Pittsburg National Bank of Commerce and President of the same for the past four years, besides being connected with various other financial institutions in Pittsburg. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

McGINLEY, John R.:

Sept. 14, 1856; son of John and Mary Logan McGinley, the latter a daughter of Robert Rainey, a man of considerable prominenece as a lawyer in Westmoreland County, Pa. Mr. McGinley's father was Superintendent of the old Portage Railroad, between Cresson Springs and Holidaysburg, Pa., then the only railroad crossing the Allegheny Mountains. Until he was thirteen years old young McGinley attended the village school in New Alexandria, Pa., where his mother resided, his father having died three weeks before the birth of the son. When Mr. McGinley reached the age of manhood he removed to Pittsburg, where he took a course in business training in Duff's Commercial College, and, after completing his course, was elected Secretary and Business Manager of the institution, and held the position for four years. Then he organized the Carbon Bronze Company, for the manufacture of special grades of anti-friction metals, in which enterprise he was remarkably successful, and accumulated considerable capital, which served as a nucleus for larger operations. It was in 1884 that Mr. George Westinghouse became interested in natural gas, and, disposing of his business, Mr. McGinley joined him in organizing the Philadelphia Natural Gas Company, and he served as Vice President until 1900; and such was its success that within two years sixteen companies were formed, with an aggregate capital of $20,000,000, but the Philadelphia company is the most prominent gas fuel company in existence, and it delivers more fuel gas daily than any other gas company in the world. As one of the organizers, promoters and active officers of the East Pittsburg Improvement Company, Mr. McGinley took a prominent part in the founding and building of the progressive industrial towns of Wilmerding, where the Westinghouse Air-Brake Company's works are situated, and East Pittsburg, where the extensive works of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, Westinghouse Machine Company and East Pittsburg Improvement Company are located. These plants are evidences of the enterprise and business genius of the man who made their establishment possible. In company with Mr. George Westinghouse, Mr. McGinley organized the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, serving as a Director for several years. He assisted in the organization and promotion of the Central Traction Company, operating cable and electric lines in Pittsburg, which was subsequently absorbed by the Pittsburg Railways Company of that city. At present Mr. McGinley is President of the Duff Manufacturing Company, and the East Pittsburg Traction Company; he is also President of the Duquesne Club; is Vice President and Director of the R. D. Nuttall Company and of the Hidalgo Milling Company of Parral, Mexico, and Director in the following institutions in Pittsburg: Fidelity Title and Trust Company, Pittsburg National Bank of Commerce, Second National Bank, Union-Fidelity Title and Trust Company, East Pittsburg National Bank, East Pittsburg Trust Company, Monongahela Water Company, Chicago Pneumatic Tool Company, of Chicago; Parral & Durango Railroad Company, Mexico; Southern Investment Company, of Texas, together with a number of others. He is a member of the following clubs: The Duquesne and the Union of Pittsburg, and the Lawyers' Club of New York. Mr. McGinley, in 1879, was married to Miss Jennie M. Atterbury, the only daughter of the late Thomas B. Atterbury, a glass manufacturer of Pittsburg. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

McMANUS, Patricius:

Contracting engineer; born at Pottsville, Pa., Nov. 22, 1847; began his business career under the direction of his grandfather and an uncle, who were prominent contractors in Pennsylvania, and in 1866, when only nineteen years old, he took a contract to build eleven miles of the Sunbury and Lewistown Railroad. This was followed by many important operations including the building of the track system of the Pennsylvania Railroad in connection with the Centennial Exposition. He has performed many extensive and difficult road building operations, one of the most striking of which was the construction of the system of tracks leading into the Broad Street Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Philadelphia, this needing to be built so as to meet the requirements of hundreds of trains daily. These are but examples of the very numerous track-laying feats of Mr. McManus. From 1884 to 1894 he was in partnership with James B. Reilly, and in 1897 he organized the McManus Construction Company, of which he is President and Manager. He is also

President of the Glen Mills Stone Quarrying and Crushing Company, and is a member of various social and other societies. Address, 3512 Baring St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Judge of Common Pleas, Philadelphia; born in Philadelphia, Pa.; educated in Philadelphia and at Harvard College. Assistant City Solicitor, Judge of Common Pleas, Philadelphia. Married Anna Mallet Prevost June 7, 1877; she died January 28, 1904. Mr. McMichael began the practice of law in September, 1872; was assistant to the City Solicitor from 1881 to 1893; was appointed to the bench in 1895; afterwards elected, having been nominated by both Republicans and Democrats. He wrote a history of the municipal law of Philadelphia. Republican in politics. Address, Court of Common Pleas No. 3, Philadelphia, Pa.

McMICHAEL, Clayton:

Journalist; born in Philadelphia, June 30, 1844; son of Morton McMichael, distinguished as the editor of the North American and of other newspapers, as Mayor of Philadelphia, and as President of the Park Commission, Philadelphia owes to him more than to any one man its magnificent Fairmount Park. Mr. McMichael was educated in the best private schools of his native city, and in the spring of 1861, though less than seventeen years old, was among the first to offer his services to the country for the coming war; he was made Second Lieutenant in the regular army, and on Aug. 5, 1861, was promoted to First Lieutenant in the Ninth United States Infantry; this remarkably rapid promotion for one so young was warranted by his excellent service throughout the war, for the first two years on the frontier and the Pacific coast, and for the last two years with the Army of the Potomac. He resigned with the rank of Colonel at the end of the war at the age of twenty-one, and entered the office of the North American, joining his father in the editorship, succeeding him as editor a few years before his death, which took place Jan. 6, 1879, and became sole proprietor of the paper in 1891; under his editorial control it maintained its standing as an ably edited and highly influential exponent of Republican principles, worthy of a journal claiming to be the oldest daily paper in America; it was originally issued as a daily paper, under its first title of the General Advertiser, Sept. 21, 1784; in 1898 the paper was sold to its present proprietors, and Mr. McMichael retired from his connection with it. In 1873 he was appointed by President Grant one of the Commissioners to the International Exposition at Vienna, and in 1882 by President Arthur to the post of United States Marshal of the District of Columbia. It is complimentary to his efficiency in the onerous duties of this office that President Cleveland declined to receive his resignation on March 4, 1885, and kept him in office till the following December. In January, 1898, he was elected City Treasurer of Philadelphia for a term of three years, and on Jan. 10, 1902, was appointed Postmaster of Philadelphia. Address, 2041 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

MEGARGEE, Louis N.:

Journalist; born in Philadelphia Nov. 7, 1855; was graduated from the Central High School; engaged in commercial pursuits, but displayed such talent as a writer that he was solicited to become a member of the staff of the Philadelphia Times on the establishment of that paper. He wrote the leading local article for the first issue of the paper, March 13, 1875, and upon this article Colonel McClure based his first editorial. Mr. Megargee's ability soon made him a marked figure among newspaper workers, and he was especially active and successful in exposing frauds, some of his exploits in this field being of a daring character. He was made city editor of the Daily News in 1879, and accepted a like position on the Press in 1880. One of his notable performances in this position was the exposure of the detective force of the city, then deeply corrupt. Another of his triumphs was the investigation of the practice of stealing dead bodies for medical colleges. In 1884 Mr. Megargee became a proprietor of the Daily News, and subsequently a New York correspondent of the Times, and editor of the New York Illustrated Graphic. He returned to Philadelphia in 1891, was made city editor of the Times, giving this up in 1895 to contribute signed articles to that paper, whose spiciness and brilliancy won him a host of readers. He continued connected with the Times until that paper went out of existence. Mr. Megargee has served as President of the Journalistic Club, of the Pen and Pencil Club, and of the International League of Press Clubs. Address, 804 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

MEHARD, Samuel S.:

Jurist; born in Butler County, Pa., but passed his early life in Mercer County, whither his parents moved in his childhood. He enjoyed excellent educational opportunities, completing his education in Westminster College, where he was graduated with high honors. He followed with the study of law under Judge Trunkey at Mercer, but after admission to the bar he went abroad, and spent a year at Heidelberg University, in the study of jurisprudence. On engaging in practice he entered into partnership with James A. Stranahan, at Mercer, but in 1883, a vacancy occurring in the office of President Judge of the district, he was appointed to this position by Governor Pattison. His eminent fitness for the office won him the election to it in November, 1884, for a term of ten years, during which he gave general satisfaction. In 1895 he resumed practice, locating at Pittsburg, where he ranks high in the profession. He has also for a number of years been a lecturer in the law department of the Western University, a duty to which his high attainments eminently adapt him. Address, Frick Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

MUSTIN, William Irwin:

Ex-President of Pittsburg Stock Exchange; born in Pittsburg June 8, 1860; his father, James G. Mustin, was of French-Huguenot ancestry, the first members of the family settling in this country about the year 1664. His mother was a Miss Frances M. Irwin, descended from a long line of Irish ancestry, settled in Pittsburg about the year 1772. The Irwin family contributed liberally their share toward laying the foundations of the Iron City that was yet to come; they were sturdy farmers and noted traders. Mr. Mustin's maternal grandfather, the Hon. W. W. Irwin, was Mayor of Pittsburg, serving his constituents faithfully in that capacity in the year 1840. He was a member of Congress and United States Minister to Denmark. Mr. Mustin is a nephew of the distinguished naval officer, Rear Admiral John Irwin, who secured to the United States the original concession in the Hawaiian Islands in 1893. Mr. Mustin's early education was obtained at home, his mother superintending his instruction up to his tenth year. He then made his first start as an errand boy in the printing house of W. G. Johnston & Co., where he remained a year, at the expiration of which time he entered the employ of George B. Hill, in a similar capacity, and became a partner in the concern of George B. Hill & Co., in 1881, and has remained with that house up to the present day. Mr. Mustin has many other interests, notable among which are the Pittsburg Coal Company, the Pittsburg Brewing Company and the Pittsburg Stove and Range Company, all of which organizations have been promoted by the firm of George B. Hill & Co. In 1898 Mr. Mustin was elected to the Presidency of the Pittsburg Stock Exchange, and served five years. Is a member of Crescent Lodge, F. and A. M.; Shiloh Chapter, R. A. M.; Tancred Commandery, K. T.; Syria Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Monongahela, Duquesne, Americus, Country and Masonic Country Clubs, and Eminent Commander, 1902, Tancred Commandery, K. T. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

MYERS, Benjamin F.:

Lawyer and publisher; born near New Centreville, Somerset County, Pa., July 6, 1833. He was educated in Somerset Academy and Jefferson College; read law in the office of Hon. William H. Koontz, and was admitted to the Somerset County bar in 1855. Previous to his admission he spent about a year in Illinois, where he was engaged in journalism, and came into contact with the leading men of that State, including Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas. He had practiced law but a short time when he again took up the journalistic profession, removing to Bedford, Pa., where he edited the Bedford Gazette from 1857 to 1874. He added to this in 1868 the labor of editing the Harrisburg Daily and Weekly Patriot, a journal of wide circulation and much influence, which, under his editorship, has become one of the leading Democratic organs of the State. He was elected to represent Bedford County in the State Legislature in 1863, and was elected to Congress in 1870. From 1874 to 1877 he was State Printer, and was a delegate to the Democratic State National Conventions of 1864 and 1880. In addition to his editorial work he has written much for periodicals. OLIVER, George Tener:

President and principal owner of The Pittsburg Gazette and owner of the controlling interest of the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph; born in Ireland, Jan. 26, 1848; son of Henry W. Oliver and Margaret Brown. His parents, who were of Scotch ancestry, moved from Ireland to Pittsburg in 1842, six years before Mr. Oliver's birth. He was educated in the public schools of Allegheny, Pa., and at the Bethany College, West Virginia, where he was graduated in 1868. His first occupation was that of a lawyer, having been admitted to the bar of Allegheny County in 1871. He practiced his profession with success for ten years, but retired in 1881 to engage in the wire business. He was first the Vice President and afterward President of the Oliver Wire Company until 1899, when that Company sold its plants and wound up its business. He was President of the Hainsworth Steel Company from 1889 until its merger in 1897 with the Oliver & Snyder Steel Company, of which he was also President until he disposed of his manufacturing interests in 1901. In June, 1900, he purchased the Pittsburg Gazette, the oldest paper west of the Alleghenies. He has since been in active control of that journal as well as of the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph, the oldest evening paper in Allegheny County. He served as Presidential Elector in 1884; was President of the Central Board of Education of Pittsburg from 1881 to 1884. Member of all the leading clubs in Pittsburg and Union League and University Clubs of New York City. Married, in 1871, to Miss Mary Kountze, of Omaha, Neb. Address, 337 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

OLIVER, Henry W.:

Manufacturer; son of Mr. Henry W. Oliver and Margaret Brown, of Donaghmore, County Tyrone, Ireland; born in the town of Dungannon, in February, 1840. His parents settled in Pittsburg in 1842, and made that place their home. He was educated in the public schools and Newell's Academy, and started to work when about thirteen years old as messenger boy in the office of the National Telegraph Company in Pittsburg. About two years later he entered the employment of Clarke & Thaw, General Forwarding Agents, where he remained for some years. In 1859 he became Shipping Clerk for the iron manufacturing firm of Graff, Bennett & Company. In 1861, at President Lincoln's first call, he enlisted in the Twelfth Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers, serving until the end of his term of enlistment of three months. He also volunteered at the time of Lee's invasion in 1863 as an emergency volunteer. The first of January, 1863, in partnership with William J. Lewis and John Phillips, he organized the firm of Lewis, Oliver & Phillips, and began to manufacture bolts and nuts on a small scale. In 1866 Mr. Oliver's two brothers were admitted to the firm, which continued in business until 1880, when the partners organized the firm of Oliver Brothers & Phillips. In the meantime the business of the firm had been enlarged to an enormous extent, until they were among the largest manufacturers of bar iron and iron specialties in the United States. In 1888 the works were incorporated under the name of the Oliver Iron & Steel Company, which is still carried on, Mr. Oliver being Chairman of the Board of Directors. In the meantime he had become identified with other industrial and railroad affairs in Pittsburg, notably a heavy stockholder in the Pittsburg & Lake Erie Railroad Company, which was the first railroad to actively compete with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for Pittsburg business and tonnage. Mr. Oliver was one of the original projectors of this road, and one of the largest stockholders, and after it was started he added very largely to his holdings. He afterward became largely interested in the Pittsburg & Western Railway, and from 1889 to 1894 he was its President. He is still Chairman of the Board of Directors; also Chairman of the Oliver & Snyder Steel Company, and President of the Oliver Iron Mining Company, which is jointly owned by the Carnegie and Oliver interests, and is the largest producer of iron ore in the world. On the formation of the Republican Party in Pittsburg in 1856, he enthusiastically adopted its principles, and has ever continued an able, consistent and successful advocate of its measures. From 1879 to 1882 Mr. Oliver was President of common Councils of Pittsburg. He was delegate from Pennsylvania to the Republican National Conventions in 1872, 1876, 1888 and 1892, and was a Presidential Elector from the State at large in 1880. In 1882 he was selected by President Arthur to represent the iron and steel interests of the country on the commission which was appointed to draw up and submit a new tariff to Congress, and it was largely through his work on this commission that the metal schedule of the tariff of 1883 was so shaped as to be mainly satisfactory to the manufacturing and industrial interests of the country. Beyond this he has never held political office. Mr. Oliver was married, in 1862, to Miss Edith A. Cassidy, of Pittsburg. They have one daughter, the wife of Henry R. Rea, President of the Baker Chain and Wagon Iron Company. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

OLIVER, James B.:

President of the Oliver Iron & Steel Company, Pittsburg, Pa; born in Allegheny City, in 1844. Mr. Oliver in 1865 became associated in the iron and steel business and has been a prominent figure in the development of the iron and steel industry of the country. The Oliver Iron & Steel Company was originally started in 1863 as Lewis, Oliver & Phillips, and afterward as Oliver Bros. & Phillips, and in 1887 incorporated as the Oliver Iron & Steel Company. For thirty-five years J. B. Oliver has devoted his time and energy to the development and increase of the business and is rocognized as an expert authority in all its branches. Address, Oliver Iron & Steel Company, 10th and Muriel Sts., S. S. Pittsburg, Pa.

OLIVER, Paul A.:

Manufacturer; born at sea on the 18th of July, 1831, on the ship Louisiana, owned and commanded by his father, Capt. Paul A. Oliver, who was a native of Philadelphia, and served as sailing-master in the United States Navy in the War of 1812. General Oliver was engaged as shipping merchant, and resided at Fort Hamilton at the time the yellow fever epidemic prevailed in that village in 1856. He established a hospital, and was made President of the Fort Hamilton Relief Society, which he organized, and by its efforts the disease was prevented from spreading to the city of Brooklyn. In January, 1862, he enlisted as Second Lieutenant in the Twelfth New York Infantry, which was assigned to the Third Brigade, First Division, Fifth Corps, stationed at Hall's Hill, Virginia. He participated in the siege of Yorktown and battle of Hanover Court House; commanded his company at the battle of Gaines Mills (where he was wounded), Second Bull Run, Antietam, and Fredericksburg. In December, 1862, his company was detailed as headquarters guard of the Fifth Corps, where it remained to the close of the war. When Gen. Butterfield was appointed Chief of Staff of the Army of the Potomac, under Hooker, Lieut. Oliver was appointed on his staff as his aide, and as such served in the campaign of Chancellorsville. In the Gettysburg campaign he was appointed personal aide to Gen. Meade, and remained on his staff until Gen. Hooker got command of the Eleventh and Twelfth Corps, when he went with him, and served on his staff in the battles of Lookout Valley, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, and Ringgold. In the Atlanta campaign, in the spring of 1864, he served with Gen. Butterfield, who had command of a division of the Twentieth Corps, as his Chief of Staff, in the battles of Resaca, Carsville, Dallas, New Hope Church, and Marietta. In July, 1864, he returned to the Army of the Potomac at his own request, and served on the staff of General Warren, part of the time as Acting Provost Marshal of the Fifth Corps. At this time he received the commission of Major, and afterward Lieutenant Colonel of the Fifth New York Veteran Volunteers, but declined. He participated in the siege of Petersburg and the various battles: Yellow Tavern, Weldon Railroad, Hatcher's Run, raid to Bellfield, and Hicksford. In January he was transferred, by special orders of Grant, to City Point on special duty, under Gen. M. R. Patrick. On the 8th of March, 1865, he was brevetted brigadier General. At the surrender of Lee he was, as Assistant Provost Marshal, engaged in paroling the Army of Northern Virginia, at Appomattox, under the direction of Gen. George H. Sharpe, Assistant Provost Marshal, who took the original paroles of the Army of Northern Virginia to the War Department, Washington, and the duplicate paroles were taken by Gen. Oliver to Richmond, and handed by him to Col. Taylor, Gen. Lee's Adjutant General. The war being closed, Gen. Oliver tendered his resignation, and was honorably discharged May 5, 1865. Since that time he has been engaged in the manufacture of powder at Laurel Run, Oliver's Mills, Pa. Gen. Oliver received the medal of honor for distinguished services at the battle of Resaca, May 15, 1864. Address, Laurel Run, Oliver's Mills, Pa.

PATTERSON, James W.:

President of the Pittsburg, Carnegie & Western Railroad Company; was born in Pittsburg, Pa., in May, 1847. His ancestors on the paternal side were from the North of Ireland. His grandfather, Nathaniel Patterson, born in Kentucky, a surveyor by profession, was a participant in the War of 1812, and his father, J. W. Patterson, was a Major of the Sixty-second Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers in the Civil War. Graduating from the public schools of Pittsburg, young Patterson studied his profession in the employ of his father, in which he attained such proficiency in general engineering and municipal improvements, that, before he reached his twenty-eighth year, he was offered and accepted the position of Principal Assistant Engineer in charge of the construction of Pittsburg's Water Works. In 1888 Mr. Patterson was Superintendent of the U. S. Government buildings, and has since been engaged in the development of and making preliminary surveys for proposed railways in Western Pennsylvania, and has located many of the railroads now in existence in that growing section of the country. Mr. Patterson is now President of the Pittsburg, Carnegie & Western Railroad, a Wabash affiliation, of which he is making a success, though he makes no pretensions to other claims than that of being a common, everyday civil engineer, still a student, and aiming to become a "top-notcher" in his profession. He held a position in the Select Councils of Pittsburg from 1877 to 1879, and is a member of the Monongahela Club of that city. He was married at Pittsburg on Feb. 3, 1870, to Miss Margaret Campbell, to whom thirteen children were born, eight of whom are living, including J. W. Patterson, Jr., a civil engineer in charge of construction work in Green County, Pa., and F. P. Patterson, dramatic editor of the Pittsburg, Dispatch. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

PATTERSON, Peter:

Consulting Engineer of the National Tube Company; born in Jedburgh, Scotland, May 12, 1842. His father was a blacksmith and engineer, and his ancestors had lived in Scotland for centuries. Mr. Patterson attended the public schools of Jedburgh and afterward was apprenticed in his father's shop. Upon completing his apprenticeship, he went to Edinburgh, Scotland, where he worked in several engineering establishments. Then he went to Glasgow, where he was employed in some of the marine engine works. He secured for himself a thorough practical training, which has stood him well in hand in his later life. In 1866 Mr. Patterson moved to America, working for a short time in Connecticut, and then in New York City for four years as a machinist. In 1871 he secured a position with the National Tube Works at Boston, Mass., as a machinist, and after six months there he was sent to McKeesport, Pa., to erect the machinery in the mill then building. He was later made foreman machinist, and held that position a number of years. After assisting in the construction of the National Rolling Mills Department of the National Tube Works Company, he became Superintendent of the National Tube Works. He satisfactorily filled this position until 1897, when he became Consulting Engineer of the National Tube Works Company and Manager of the United States Seamless Tube Works. These latter works he designed and constructed. Mr. Patterson continued in these positions until he became Consulting Engineer of the National Tube Company. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

PATTERSON, P. C.:

Mechanical engineer; born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1869. At an early age moved with his parents to McKeesport and obtained the first rudiments of his education there. While attending school he worked during his spare time in the machine shop of the National Tube Company, and also during the summer vacation. After quitting school remained at work a year, in the meantime having taken a course in the engineering department of the Western University of Pennsylvania. Later was transferred to the draughting department and became foreman of the machine shop, from which place he was called to the post of Constructing Engineer, and later made Superintendent of the lap mill. A number of his patents are now used at the works. Mr. Patterson is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania, and the Iron and Steel Institute of Great Britain. Address, Frick Building, Pittsburg, Pa.

Pattison, the Pattison National Bank was organized, of which he is President. Democrat in politics. Address, Elkland, Tioga County, Pa.

Ex-Governor of Pennsylvania; born in Quantico, Md., Dec. 8, 1850; son of Rev. Robert H. Pattison, a prominent divine in the Methodist Church. His parents removed to Philadelphia when he was six years old, and he was educated in the public schools of that city, delivering the valedictory address of his class on his graduation from the Central High School. Selecting the law for his profession, he entered the office of Lewis C. Cassidy, then one of the most brilliant advocates of the Pennsylvania bar; he was admitted to practice in 1872, and had excellent promise of success, but his fluency as a public speaker led him into the political field as one of the leaders of the Democratic Party in Philadelphia. His growing prominence in the party councils brought him forward as a candidate for Auditor General of the State in 1877, but he was defeated in the convention by William P. Schell. A few months afterward he was nominated for City Controller; reform in this department was badly needed, the people were in a mood to revolt against the dominant party, and Mr. Pattison was elected by 2,000 majority; he was put there to reform the administration of the office, and he did this so decidedly as to meet the warm approval of the people. At the next election he was again triumphant, this time with 13,593 majority, though opposed by a strong candidate. His probity in office won him the confidence of the people irrespective of party, and at the election for Governor in 1882 he was nominated and received at the election a majority of 40,202 votes over his opponent, he being the first Democratic Governor of Pennsylvania for thirty years; in the Gubernatorial chair he succeeded in reducing the State debt, in holding corporations strictly to the law, repressing extravagant appropriations, and in managing the State finances with unusual economy. He retired in 1886, since no Governor can hold office for two consecutive terms. During the next four years he was engaged in legal practice and was made President of the Chestnut Street National Bank, while as President of the Pacific Railroad Commission, to which President Cleveland appointed him, he gave a most valuable report of the financial state of that corporation. In 1890 he was again nominated for Governor on a reform platform, and was elected with a majority of 16,554, running 37,000 ahead of his party ticket; this term of office was distinguished by the same qualities which made the former one memorable, and Governor Pattison retired with a national reputation for probity and public spirit. Since then he has practiced law. In 1902 he was the Democratic candidate for Governor, but was defeated. Address, 5930 Drexel Road, Overbrook, Philadelphia, Pa.

PATTON, Alexander Ennis:

PEARSON, Alfred L.:

Soldier and lawyer; born in Pittsburg, Dec. 28, 1838; son of Joseph Pearson, who served under Wellington in the battle of Waterloo; his great grandfather on his mother's side served as a soldier under Washington, he thus coming on both sides from fighting stock; educated in the public schools at Jefferson College and the Allegheny College; studied law and was admitted to the bar of Allegheny County in 1861. The war had then begun and he immediately recruited a company, arming and equipping it at his own expense, but it was not until August, 1862, that he succeeded in having his company regularly enlisted, he being made Captain of Company A, 155th Pennsylvania Regiment; his courage and attention to duty brought him quick promotion, he being made successively Major, Lieutenant Colonel and Colonel of the Regiment, while his excellent conduct at the battle of Peeble's Farm, Va., in 1864, brought him the brevet rank of Brigadier General. On March 29, 1865, at a critical moment in the fighting of that day, General Pearson dashed up to his old regiment, the 155th Pennsylvania, seized its colors, shouted "Follow your ag or lose it!" and rode toward the enemy; the men, who had been shrinking before a hot fire, followed him with a wild shout, drove back the enemy, and captured and held the plank road, the central point of the action. He did other excellent work on that day, his gallantry bringing him the brevet rank of Major General, and in 1867 a medal of honor from the War Department for most distinguished gallantry in action. Taking up the practice of law after the war, his ability soon brought him the position of District Attorney of Allegheny County; he also served in the Select Council and on the Board of Health of Pittsburg. He subsequently entered the National Guard of Pennsylvania, in which he was made Major General, and was in personal command of the troops at Pittsburg, Scranton, Carbondale and Plymouth during the railroad strike riots of 1877; he was accused of murder by some of the rioters, but the Grand Jury ignored the bill. He succeeded General Hartranft as a member of the Board of Managers of the Home for Volunteer Disabled Soldiers; was one of the founders of the Union Veterans' Legion and was twice elected its National Commander, and was Second Department Commander of Pennsylvania, Grand Army of the Republic. He resides at "Harwood," on the Ohio, about fourteen miles from Pittsburg. Address, Pittsburg, Pa.

PEARSON, Edward Pennington:

Colonel United States Army; born at Lebanon, Pa., 1837; his father was Edward P. Pearson, attorney-at-law; his mother was a daughter of Judge Frederick Smith of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. Mr. Pearson was a civil engineer at Reading, Pa., and enlisted in the Ringgold Artillery of the Pennsylvania Volunteers, who were the first troops to reach Washington, April 18, 1861; Adjutant Twenty-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, May 1, 1861; First Lieutenant Seventeenth Regular Infantry, June 24, 1861. He served in the Division of Regular Infantry, Fifth Army Corps, at the siege of Yorktown, battles of Gaines Mill, Malvern Hill, Second Bull Run, Antietam and Fredericksburg. He was on the staff of Major General Howard, commanding Eleventh Army Corps, at the battles of Chancellorsville and Gettysburg; transferred with Howard's Army Corps to the Army of the Cumberland, and was present at the battles of Wauhatchie, Chattanooga, and the various actions and skirmishes of the Atlanta campaign, having his horse shot under him at the battle of Jonesboro when Atlanta was captured. When General Howard was promoted to command the Army of the Tennessee, he asked for the transfer of Pearson, who, as his staff officer, accompanied the right wing on General Sherman's march to the sea, and participated in the battle of Bentonsville, N. C. Captain Pearson was made a Major by brevet for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Chancellorsville, Va., and a Lieutenant Colonel by brevet for gallant and meritorious services during the Atlanta campaign. As Captain of the Seventeenth Infantry he served in Texas, Dakota and Montana; as Major of the Twenty-first Infantry he served in Idaho, Oregon, Nebraska and Wyoming; as Lieutenant Colonel of the Twenty-fourth Infantry he served in Indian Territory and Arizona; on his promotion to Colonel Tenth Infantry, October, 1891, he served in New Mexico and Oklahoma. In 1898, when General Shafter was organizing his expedition for the invasion of Cuba, Colonel Pearson was placed in command of the Second Brigade in Kent's Division. For his services at Santiago de Cuba, on General Kent's recommendation, he was promoted to the grade of Brigadier General of Volunteers; he was mustered out as Brigadier General, Nov. 30, 1898, and eight days afterward was on his way with his regiment to Cuba again. General Ludlow, the military Governor of the City of Havanna organized all the troops in Havana as a Provisional Brigade under the command of Colonel Pearson. While in Cuba he had frequent returns of the Sanitago malaria, when the surgeons told him he must leave Cuba to save his life. He was retired after thirty-eight years of service in May, 1899, being over sixty-two years of age. Address, Hotel Nottingham, Boston, Mass.

PEARSON, Johnson:

Lawyer; born in Mercer County, Pa., Jan. 10, 1819, a descendant of the Pearson family who came to Pennsylvania with William Penn and settled in Delaware County of that State. Mr. Pearson spent his youthful days in hard work on his fathers farm, attending the district school, and entering in 1837 Allegheny College, where he graduated in 1840. He studied law in Mercer under his cousin Hon. John J. Pearson, was admitted to the bar in 1842, and has practiced before the Mercer County Courts for more than sixty years. He was appointed Deputy Attorney General for the county in 1848, and this office being abolished in 1850, he was elected District Attorney in 1851. Originally a member of the Whig Party, and casting his first Presidential ballot for Wiliam Henry Harrison, in 1840, he joined the Republican Party on its organization in 1856, and since then has been an earnest member of this party, though holding no office under it. He was elected Chief Burgess of West Chester in February, 1903, for a term of three years. Address, West Chester, Pa.

PENNYPACKER, Galusha:

Brigadier General and Brevet Major General United States Army; is a native of Pennsylvania, belonging to one of its oldest families, whose names are written in the annals of the State and nation. The appointment to West Point from the Sixth Congressional District having been tendered him, he would, but for the war, have probably entered the Military Academy in 1861 or 1862. General Pennypacker entered the service in April, 1861. Declining, on account of his youth, the appointment of First Lieutenant in his company, A, of the Ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, he was made a non-commissioned staff officer of that regiment, and served with it, during its three months of service in Major General Patterson's column, in the Shenandoah Valley, Va. He entered "for the war" as Captain of Company A, Ninety-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, Aug. 22, 1861, and was promoted Major Oct. 7 following. The Ninety-seventh Regiment joined the Tenth Corps in the Department of the South, and during the years 1862 and 1863 participated in all the various movements, engagements and sieges in which that corps took part, on the coasts of South Carolina (Forts Wagner and Gregg, James Island and siege of Charleston), Georgia (capture of Fort Pulaski), and Florida (taking of Fernandina and Jacksonville). He commanded his regiment and the post of Fernandina, Florida, in April, 1864, when the regiment was ordered with the Tenth Corps to Virginia, and became part of the Army of the James. Promoted to Lieutenant Colonel April 3, 1864, and to Colonel June 23 following. In action in command of his regiment at Swift Creek, May 9, Drewry's Bluff, May 16, and Chester Station, May 18. On May 20 he led his regiment in an assault upon the enemy's lines at Green Plains, Bermuda Hunderd, receiving three severe wounds, losing 175 men killed and wounded out of 295 taken into the charge. Assigned to command the Second Brigade, Second Division, Tenth Corps, in September, and on the 29th led his brigade in the successful assault upon Fort Harrison, where he was again wounded, and his horse shot under him. In action Oct. 7 at Chaffin's Farm, and on the 29th at Darbytown Road. With the first Fort Fisher expedition under General Butler, Dec. 1 to 31. General Pennypacker's brigade (composed of New York and Pennsylvania regiments) formed a portion of the expeditionary corps which, under command of Major General Terry, made the successful (and perhaps most brilliant of the war) assault upon Fort Fisher, North Carolina, Jan. 15, 1865. For his distinguished personal gallantry in this assault, when he was most severely (and it was thought for a time mortally) wounded, and "for gallant and meritorious services during the war," Pennypacker received six brevets or promotions as follows: Brevet Brigadier General United States Volunteers, Jan. 15, 1865; Brigadier General United States Volunteers, Feb. 18, 1865; Brevet Major General United States Volunteers, March 13, 1865; Colonel Thirty-fourth (designation changed to Sixteenth) Infantry United States Army, July 28, 1866; Brevet Brigadier General United States Army, March 2, 1867, and Brevet Major General United States Army, March 2, 1867. Commissioned Brigadier General United States Army in May, 1904. The Congressional medal of honor was awarded General Pennypacker for "bravery at the battle of Fort Fisher." He was one of the youngest (if not the youngest) general officers of the war, and was the youngest man in the history of the regular army to be commissioned a Colonel and Brevet Major General. His commanding general emphasized the declaration that Pennypacker and not himself was the real hero of Fort Fisher, and that his "great gallantry was only equalled by his modesty." Since the war (with the exception of two years on leave in Europe), General Pennypacker has served in the Southern, Southwestern and Western States, performing the duties incidental to a regimental and post commander. He was temporarily in command of the District of Mississippi in 1867, the Fourth Military District in 1868, the Department of Mississippi in 1870, the U. S. troops in New Orleans in 1874, and the Department of the South in 1876. Placed on the retired list of the army in 1883, on account of wounds received, he has since resided in Philadelphia. Address, 300 South Tenth St., Philadelphia.

PENNYPACKER, Samuel Whitaker: Governor of Pennsylvania; born in Phoenixville, Chester County, Pa., April 9, 1843. His father having been appointed to a professorship in the Philadelphia Medical College, the family moved to that city, and young Pennypacker was sent to the Northwest Grammar School, from which he was given a scholarship in Saunders Institute, West Philadelphia. On the death of his father, after several years' residence in Philadelphia, he returned to Phoenixville, where he attended the Grovemont Seminary. He prepared for Yale University, but through circumstances beyond his control was prevented from attending that institution of learning. In 1862 he took an examination for teachers' certificate in Montgomery County, and that winter taught school in Mont Clare. In 1863 he enlisted and was sworn in as a United States Volunteer, joining Company F, of Pottstown, Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania Emergency Regiment, which was the first force to meet the rebels at Gettysburg. On his return from military service he began the study of law, entering the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania, and at the same time registering as a law student in the office of Hon. Peter McCall. In 1886 he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Laws and immediately engaged in the practice of the legal profession. In the same year he was elected President of the Bancroft Literary Union, and in 1868 was chosen President of the Law Academy. In 1886 he was appointed a member of the Philadelphia Board of Education. He was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States in 1887, and in 1889 was appointed Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia by Governor Beaver. In the same year he was elected to the same position for a term of ten years, and in 1899 was re-elected for a similar term. At the time of his nomination for Governor of Pennsylvania by the Republican State Convention he was President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas No. 2 of Philadelphia; declined the nomination to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. He is President of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and of the Philobiblon Club; Vice President of the Sons of the Revolution and of the Colonial Society; Past Commander of Frederick Taylor Post No. 19, Grand Army of the Republic; member of the Society of Colonial Wars and of the Society of the War of 1812. He is also a Trustee of the University of Pennsylvania. For a number of years he was a member of the Valley Forge Commission. He is the author of "Pennsylvania Colonial Cases," "Pennypacker's Supreme Court Reports," "A Digest of the Common Law Reports," the "Settlement of Germantown," "Historical and Biographical Sketches," and over fifty books and papers. The University of Pennsylvania has conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws. His library of early Pennsylvania publications contains over 8,000 books and manuscripts. He was married Oct. 20, 1870, to Virginia Earl, daughter of Nathan B. Broomall, of Chester County, and their family consists of three daughters and a son. Address, Harrisburg, Pa.

Senator; was born in Baltimore, Md., in October, 1841. He served as a soldier during the Civil War for two years and ten months, until the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomattox. After the close of the war he entered the Maryland University Medical College, from which institution he graduated in 1867. He commenced his practice in the medical profession. In 1868 he removed to Auburn, Schuylkill County. He also entered into the drug business in Auburn in 1892. He has been a member of both County and State Medical Associations. He is favorably known as a physician of skill and learning; served one term as Coroner of Schuylkill County. He owns an excellent farm in West Brunswick Township, and valuable real estate in Auburn. Married, in 1867, to Emma C. Weishapuple, of Baltimore. To them have been born five children: Charles E., Foster K., E. Lulu, Flora J., and Charles. His sons are all deceased, and his two daughters are married. He is at present serving a term as State Senator of Pennsylvania. Address, 275 Briggs St., Auburn, Pa.

QUAY, Matthew Stanley:

United States Senator; born at Dillsburg, York County, Pa., Sept. 30, 1833. He was the son of a Presbyterian clergyman, who left York County when his son was six years of age, going to Pittsburg and thence to Beaver County, which has since been Senator Quay's headquarters. He received his education in Jefferson College, graduating at seventeen, and at once beginning the study of law in the office of Judge Sterrett at Pittsburg. During his interval of legal study he spent nearly a year in the South, where he lectured and taught school in Texas. Returning home and resuming his law studies, he was admitted to the bar in 1854, and 1855 was appointed Prothonotary of Beaver County, an office to which he was elected in 1855, and again in 1859. When the Civil War began he resigned from this office and enlisted in the Tenth Pennsylvania Reserves, in which he was soon made First Lieutenant, and shortly after was appointed by Governor Curtin Commissary General, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. In this position he showed such high efficiency that the Governor made him his private secretary. After serving a year in this capacity, in August, 1862, he went to the front as Colonel of the 134th Pennsylvania Infantry, spending some months in active service; he was then attacked by typhoid fever, and so reduced in health that his friends insisted on his resigning his commission; yet after his discharge from the service he took part as a volunteer in the battle of Fredericksburg and displayed such gallantry that he was awarded the Congressional medal of honor. His next employments were as Military State Agent at Washington, and as Military Secretary to the Governor, and in 1864 he was elected to the Legislature for Washington and Beaver Counties, serving in that body for several terms. In 1868 he began his special political career as Secretary of the Republican State Central Committee. Possessed of a native taste for journalism, he had proposed during his boyhood trip to the South to start a Union newspaper in Louisiana, and in 1869 he established the Beaver Radical, which under his skillful and able control soon gained a leading place among the political papers of the State. He took a prominent part in the contest, which led to the election as Governor of John F. Hartranft, and was in consequence appointed Secretary of State for Pennsylvania, holding this position from 1872 to 1878, and subsequently from 1879 to 1882. In the interval between these two terms he held the position of Recorder of Philadelphia. By this time Mr. Quay had become very prominent in the councils of the Republican Party, and when, in 1887, he was nominated for State Treasurer, he was elected by nearly 50,000 majority. The highest honor the State could confer on him came in 1887, when he was elected to the United States Senate, an exalted position which he has since retained. As Senator his influence and power in the councils of his party became assured and he has since then held an absolute control over the political actions of the Republicans of Pennsylvania, despite all efforts to deprive him of this power. After his election to the Senate he was made Chairman of the Republican National Committee and of the Executive Committee of that body, and had charge of the party canvass which led to the election of Gen. Harrison to the Presidency. In the National Convention of 1896 he received the solid vote of the Pennsylvania delegation, and a number of votes from other States for the Presidential nomination. As a member of the Senate he, while not much given to speech making, has made himself one of the most prominent and best known of our national legislators, and no man in the United States has a wider reputation than Senator Quay. In 1899 he failed to be re-elected and was tried for misappropriation of public funds while Recorder of Philadelphia, but was acquitted, and was subsequently appointed United States Senator by Governor Stone. This appointment was rejected in the Senate in 1900, but he was subsequently elected, and still occupies his seat in the Senate, though affirming his intention to retire at the close of his present term. What is called the "political machine" has reached its highest development in Senator Quay's able hands, and he is still the autocrat of the party in Pennsylvania. Address, Beaver, Pa.

RAWLE, William Brooke:

Lawyer; born in Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 29, 1843, being the eldest son of Charles Wallace Brooke, deceased, by his first wife, Elizabeth Tilghman, daughter of the well known lawyer, William Rawle (the younger), granddaughter of the celebrated jurist, Edward Tilghman, who is remembered as one of the "Leaders of the Old Bar of Philadelphia," and great granddaughter of Benjamin Chew, Chief Justice of Pennsylvania before the Revolution. Mr. Brooke was a member of the Philadelphia bar, who attained a high place thereat for his ability and brilliancy, but died in 1849 at the early age of thirty-six years. His father, Robert Brooke, son of Captain John Brooke of the Revolutionary Army, was well known as a surveyor and civil engineer in Philadelphia, and his mother was a daughter of Colonel (afterward General) Andrew Porter of the Revolutionary Army. The subject of this sketch was educated in the best schools of his native city, entered the University of Pennsylvania in the fall of 1859, and was graduated therefrom as Bachelor of Arts, July 3, 1863, having received during his senior year leave of absence from the college authorities to enter the army, and taking his degree while actually engaged in the battle of Gettysburg. He received his degree as Master of Arts, July 3, 1866. He entered the army during the War of the Rebellion as Second Lieutenant in the Third Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and served continuously with the Army of the Potomac from early in 1863 until some time after the close of the war, attaining the lineal rank of Captain, and being brevetted Major and Lieutenant Colonel for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Hatcher's Run, and in the campaign terminating with Lee's surrender at Appomattox Court House, respectively. Upon his discharge from the army, declining a commission in the Seventh United States Cavalry, he began the study of law with his uncle, the late William Henry Rawle, and was admitted to practice at the Philadelphia bar May 18, 1867, shortly before which, by legal authority, he assumed the name of William Brooke Rawle in lieu of William Rawle Brooke. He was associated in practice with Mr. Rawle until the death of the latter in 1889, when he succeeded him at the head of the law office which had been established in 1783 by his great grandfather, William Rawle (the elder), one of the greatest lawyers of his time. He became County Surveyor, went to St. Louis in 1847, and to California in 1849. His experience in the gold fields was followed by his return to Clarion in 1852, where he studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1853. In 1857 he formed a partnership with his preceptor, Thomas Sutton, which lasted till 1860. The next year he raised a company and went into the army; returning in August, 1862, he raised another company in July, 1863, for six months' service, and was elected Major of his regiment. At the end of his army service he resumed practice, removing to Titusville in 1871, later to Erie, and returning to Clarion in 1877, where he has since practiced. Mr. Reid is a lawyer of marked powers, and his experience as a surveyor has made him especially capable in land boundary disputes. Address, Clarion, Pa.

REILLY, James B.:

Lawyer and legislator; born in Schuylkill County, Pa., Aug. 12, 1845, his father being a prominent railroad and civil engineer, who, in addition to building various railroads, had much to do with laying out Atlantic City and other South Jersey seaside resorts. Choosing the law as his profession, Mr. Reilly was admitted to the bar of Schuylkill County, in 1869, and subsequently to those of the State Supreme Court and the United States Circuit and District Courts. An earnest and active Democrat in political affiliation, he soon became well known as a party worker, and in 1871 was elected District Attorney of his county. At the end of his term, in 1874, he was nominated for Congress, and elected for this and the succeeding term. He retired in 1878, to devote himself to his profession, but in 1881 and 1882 was run by his party for Judge and again in 1884 for Congress. Defeated on these occasions, he was elected to Congress in 1888, and again in 1890, and 1892, but was defeated in 1894.

In March, 1896, President Cleveland appointed him United States Marshal for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. Mr. Reilly is warmly interested in charitable institutions, and has served as a Trustee of the Anthracite State Hospital. Address, Pottsvile, Pa.

REINOEHL, Adam Cyrus:
Lawyer; born in Lebanon, Pa., Nov. 15, 1840. In 1856 his parents settled in Lancaster, Pa. Entering Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, he graduated in 1861, delivering the valedictory oration, the highest honor of the class. After teaching school for two months and twenty-three days in Ephrata Township, he enlisted in the Seventy-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, Keystone Zouaves. Entering the service as a private in Company D, he took part in all the campaigns and battles of the regiment. The Seventy-sixth was ordered to Port Royal, South Carolina, in the fall of 1861, and was actively engaged in the sieges and engagements in the Department of the South. In April, 1862, the regiment was ordered to Tybee Island, and was present at the siege and capture of Fort Pulaski. Mr. Reinoehl served as private of Company D in the campaign against Charleston on James Island, June, 1862, and in the battle of Pocotaligo, South Carolina, Oct. 22, 1862. On the 10th of December, 1862, he was promoted to regimental Quartermaster Sergeant, and January 24, 1863, he was promoted to Sergeant Major. The Seventy-sixth was in Strong's brigade, which charged and captured the rebel batteries on Morris Island, South Carolina, July 10. On the morning of July 11, 1863, the Seventy-sixth Pennsylvania, with four companies of the Seventh Connecticut and Ninth Maine, charged Fort Wagner, and were repulsed. The Seventy-sixth lost one hundred and eighty-seven killed, wounded, and missing. Sergeant Maj. Reinoehl was shot through the left arm with a Minnie ball, and was permanently disabled. Returning to his regiment after a furlough, he remained in the service, and re-enlisted April, 1864, for three years, and while on veteran furlough, having been recommended for promotion by Col. Strawbridge, received from the hands of Gov. A. G. Curtin, at Harrisburg, a commission as First Lieutenant of Company B, April 27, 1864. He commanded the company during the campaign of the Tenth Corps, in the Army of the James and Army of the Potomac, at Cold Harbor, at the explosion of the mine, and in the siege of Petersburg. On the 4th of August, 1864, he was promoted to Adjutant. On the 27th of October, in a charge on the rebel works at Darbytown Road, Va., the outer defences of Richmond, he was severely wounded in the left thigh by a ball from a shrapnel shell, and was removed to his home at Lancaster. Disabled for months, he resigned, and was honorably discharged Feb. 6, 1865. March 13, 1865, he was brevetted Captain "for gallant and meritorious service in the assault on Fort Wagner, S. C.," and was brevetted Major "for gallant and meritorious service in the attack on the enemy's works on Darbytown Road, Va., Oct. 27, 1864." In 1866 he was admitted to the bar of Lancaster County. In 1868 he was elected to the Pennsylvania Legislature, and subsequently re-elected, 1870-1871, serving three terms. In 1872 appointed Deputy Secretary of the Commonwealth by Gov. J. W. Geary, and was continued by Gov. John F. Hartranft, until he resigned, in 1873, to resume the practice of his profession. On retiring he was tendered letters highly complimentary of his services by Gov. Hartranft and Hon. M. S. Quay, Secretary of the Commonwealth. In 1889 he was appointed a member of the Soldiers' Orphans' Commission of the State of Pennsylvania by the department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic. In 1889 Major Reinoehl was elected District Attorney of the County of Lancaster, his term expiring Jan. 1, 1893. He married Miss Lucy Davis, Nov. 24, 1870. RICHARDS, Joseph T.:

Railroad engineer; born near Rising Sun, Md., Feb. 12, 1845. Studying the art of civil engineering, he entered the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in 1869 as rodman and transit man in the building of the Altoona shops, and afterward served successively as division supervisor, chief engineer of minor railroads and chief of locating engineers, leaving the railroad service in 1874 to enter that of the Cambria Iron Company. Returning to the railroad in 1875 he was again made division supervisor, assistant engineer, and from 1877 to 1883 was principal engineer of the United Railroads of New Jersey, and till 1885 assistant to the chief engineer. This was followed by the position of assistant chief engineer, and in 1893 by that of engineer of maintenance of way from Pittsburg and Erie east to Philadelphia, Washington and New York. His activity and ability have been amply shown in the rapid replacement of bridges and roadbed after destructive floods, in which he has never been surpassed. On one occasion he rebuilt one thousand feet of railroad bridge over the swollen Susquehanna at Montgomery in three and a half days. A recent remarkable feat was the replacing of the old metal span of the railroad bridge of the New York Division over the Schuylkill at Philadelphia, the old double-track bridge being moved off and a new one moved in, the distance being twenty-seven feet, in two minutes and a half, trains passing from the old to the new bridge within the brief space of thirteen minutes. Mr. Richards has also long been designing and constructing engineer for the piers at New York of the International Navigation Company. He is Vice President of the West End Trust Company and Director in other companies in Philadelphia. Past President of the Engineers' Club, and a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and the American Society of Civil Engineers. Address, 210 N. Thirty-third St., Philadelphia, Pa.

RICHARDS, Joseph W.:

Professor of Metallurgy; born in Oldbury, near Birmingham, England, on July 28, 1864. Coming to America with his parents in 1871, he attended the public schools in Philadelphia and the High School, graduating from Lehigh University in 1866 as analytical chemist. The next year was spent as assistant to his father, Mr. Joseph Richards, Superintendent of the Delaware Metal Refinery, Philadelphia. In 1887 became Instructor in the Department of Metallurgy and Mineralogy of Lehigh University, where he is now Professor of Metallurgy. Married Miss Arnamarie Gadd, March 12, 1887; they have three children. In 1887 the Philadelphia High School conferred on him the honorary degree of Master of Arts. From 1889 to 1893 he was a post-graduate student at Lehigh University, receiving therefor the degree of Master of Science in 1891 and Doctor of Philosophy in 1893, the first person to take that degree at the institution. In 1897 he was Assistant Professor in his department and given a year's leave of absense, which was spent, half at the University of Heidelberg and a semester at Bergakademie at Freiberg. In 1897 was a member of the Annual Assay Commission to test the coinage; also served as President of the Chemical Section of the Franklin Institute and also of the Lehigh Valey Section of the American Chemical Society, and as delegate of the Franklin Instiute to represent it at the Internatnional Geological Congress in St. Petersburg. Dr. Richards's interest in aluminum began with his thesis work for the course in Lehigh University in 1886, in which connection he experimented on the reducibility of aluminum sulphide. In connection with his work he collected together all the available literature on the subject which was published in 1887 as "Aluminum." A contributor also to the Aluminum World, Journal of the Franklin Institute and Journal of the American Chemical Society. His published papers and lectures number nearly sixty and cover a wide range of scientific subjects, principally in metallurgy, electro-chemistry, thermo-chemistry, physical chemistry, mineralogy and crystallography. RICKETTS, Col. Robert Bruce:

Born at Orangeville, Columbia County, Pa., April 29, 1839, of Scotch and English descent. He was educated at the Wyoming Seminary, and was reading law when the war broke out. He promptly entered the Union service, and, having assisted in recruiting a battery, was commissioned First Lieutenant of Battery F, First Pennsylvania Artillery, Forty-third Regiment, July 8, 1861; to Captain, May 8, 1863; to Major, Dec. 4, 1864; and to Colonel, March 15, 1865. The battery was furnished during the month of August, 1861, with horses and equipments and four smooth-bore guns. On Sept. 12 the battery was ordered to join Banks's command at Dorranceton, Md., and was from that date in active service up to the close of the war. Colonel Ricketts had his first engagement Dec. 20, 1861, with a body of the enemy's artillery and cavalry which was attempting the destruction of Dam No. 5 on the Upper Potomac. For more than three years from that time on Ricketts was constantly at the front, and his battery became one of the most famous in the Union Army. In almost every one of the engagements of 1862, 1863 and 1864, in Maryland and Virginia, it was prominently engaged, and at Gettysburg, especially, it did brilliant service in assisting to repel the invasion of the Confederates on the right of the Union lines at Cemetery Ridge. In this fight Ricketts lost forty horses and twenty-three men. His name is so closely linked with that battle, upon which the fate of the nation hung, and who stood by his guns, beating back the fierce onslaughts of the Louisiana Tigers, which threatened every moment to override, like a monumental wave, the gallant little band, whose blazing speech sent terror into the hearts of those who endeavored to silence it, is fairly entitled to the honors won on that bloody occasion, and there is not a soldier in the old Army of the Potomac, in Pennsylvania or out, who does not recall Ricketts whenever he thinks of Gettysburg. When promoted to his Majority he left his battery and was assigned to the command of the Second Army Corps batteries in the Ninth Corps line; afterward as Inspector of Artillery for the Ninth Corps. This last position he held during most of the winter of 1864-1865, and while the army was in front of Petersburg, and he retained it until after Lee's surrender. He was then Inspector of the Artillery Reserve under Gen. William Hayes, the reserve then embracing nearly all the batteries in the army. During the greater part of the war Ricketts's battery was attached to the Second Corps. What the commander of that corps—the lamented Hancock—thought of him is briefly but eloquently set forth in a note forwarded by him to the Loyal Legion, in answer to an inquiry sent in connection with the proposal of Ricketts for membership in that organization. Hancock wrote: "Colonel Ricketts is well known to me, and served under my command during the war, in the Second Army Corps, Army of the Potomac. He was a gallant and distinguished officer of irreproachable record, and as such I can recommend him for membership in the Military Order of the Loyal Legion." After the war Hancock and others urged him to join the regular service, where an appropriate place could have been easily secured for him, but he declined all these offers and returned to private life. Colonel Ricketts was a Hancock delegate to the Cincinnati Convention, where the Democracy named the great General for the Presidency. In 1886 his nomination as Lieutenant Governor was one of the few instances on record in which the nomination sought the man. Address, Wilkesbarre, Pa.

ROACH, John B.:

Shipbuilder; born in New York City Dec. 7, 1839; son of the famous shipbuilder, John Roach; educated in the Ashland Collegiate Institute, Greene County, N. Y. Mr. Roach began his business life in a wholesale coffee establishment, but later entered his father's office, leaving it for a time on account of feeble health to take charge of a large farm owned by his father. The elder Roach conducted an extensive shipbuilding business, and had developed an immense trade in the Etna Iron Works. He purchased the Morgan Iron Works in 1867, and took in his son as partner, the firm name being John Roach & Son. A very large shipbuilding business grew up under the new firm, over one thousand hands being employed. In 1871, when a large ship yard was purchased at Chester, Pa., the son, John B., was placed in charge of this, which was run under the title of the Delaware River Iron Ship Building and Engine Works. Here, at times, more than two thousand hands were employed, and a great shipbuilding plant was developed under Mr. Roach's supervision. Many large iron vessels were built for the Pacific Mail, the Mallory and various other steamship companies, and in 1883 the firm contracted to build the cruisers Chicago, Boston, Atlanta and Dolphin, the pioneer ships of the new American Navy. A hostile Naval Board refused to accept the Dolphin in 1885, on the plea that the contract was not binding, the result being the ruin of John Roach's business and his death. The company was now reorganized, John B. Roach becoming President of the Delaware River Works, and Vice President of the Morgan Iron Company, and the business has grown to be very prosperous, many large vessels having been built. Address, Chester, Pa.

SELLERS, Coleman:

Engineer and inventor; born in Philadelphia, Jan. 28, 1827; educated in the public schools and in Bolmar's Academy, West Chester, Pa.; in 1846 he became a draughtsman in the Globe Rolling Mills of Cincinnati, Ohio, remaining there for three years, part of the time as Superintendent. He then entered the service of Niles & Co., locomotive builders, Cincinnati, as foreman, remaining with them for five years. In 1851, while engaged in Cincinnati, he married Cornelia Wells of that city. He returned to Philadelphia, and in 1856 entered as chief engineer the machine tool works of William Sellers & Co., the senior member of which firm was his second cousin; he remained in this establishment until 1888, when he withdrew from active engineering labor and confined himself to consulting practice, to which his long experience in engineering admirably adapted him. He became widely known as an inventor, more than thirty patents being granted him, some being for mechanical devices of great utility; a notable one of these is his coupling device for connecting shafting, invented in 1857; it is very important as the essential factor in the modern system of interchangeable parts in shafting; most notable among his other inventions is that of feed discs for lathes, patented in 1866. As early as 1861 he recommended the use of absorbent cotton in surgical operations, now everywhere employed; he proposed the employment of glycerin to keep photographic plates wet, and has, in fact, shown himself always active in devising practical applications. In 1881 he was appointed Professor of Mechanics in Franklin Institute, of which he had long been a member, and in 1888 was appointed non-resident Professor of Engineering Practice in the Stevens Institute of Technology; in the same year he received the degree of Doctor of Engineering from that institution, and in 1899 the degree of Doctor of Science was conferred on him by the University of Pennsylvania. The King of Sweden honored him with the Order of St. Olaf in 1877 in recognition of his valued services to the engineering profession. He was President of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in 1884, and has been President of the Photographic Society of Philadelphia, the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and the Pennsylvania Museum and School of Industrial Art; Vice President of the American Philosophical Society, and a member of many other societies in America and Europe. Journalist and ex-Postmaster General; born in Mansfield, Conn., Feb. 18, 1842; son of Emory B. and Arvilla T. Smith, and a descendant of Isaac Smith, a Captain in the Revolutionary War. The family removed to Albany, N. Y., when he was seven years old, and here he was educated in the public schools, Albany Academy, and Union College, Schnectady, where he was graduated in 1861. He edited a daily paper in Albany for six months when he was sixteen years of age, during his school life at Albany Academy. In 1861 he became engaged under General Rathbone in raising and organizing regiments for the war; afterward taught for several years in Albany Academy, and in 1865 became editor of the Albany Express, to which he had previously contributed leading articles. During this interval, in 1863, he married Ella Huntly. They have no children. The Express greatly developed under Mr. Smith's editorial control, but he left it in 1870 to become editor of the Albany Journal, the recognized Republican organ in that city. He remained connected with the Journal till 1880, meanwhile taking an active part in politics, especially in connection with the Republican State Committee, the State party platforms for several years being practically his work. He was the first to introduce in these platforms an indorsement of the new doctrine of civil service reform. He served as Regent of the University of New York, 1879-1880. In 1880 Mr. Smith removed to Philadelphia, where he became editor of the Press, the most influential Republican organ of that city. He has since that date been editor of that journal, which has played a leading part in party politics under his control. Mr. Smith's active connection with political affairs has been long continued, and he has taken part in several Republican National Conventions, in which he was an efficient aid in preparing the party platforms. In 1890 he was appointed by President Harrison United States Minister to Russia, where he remained until 1892; and in April, 1898 he became a member of President McKinley's Cabinet as Postmaster General. In this position he had much to do with the establishment of free rural delivery of the mails, and remained in office until after the assassination of President McKinley, resigning on Jan. 15, 1902, under the Roosevelt Administration, to resume his editorials duties. During this period Mr. Smith received the honorary degree of LL. D. from Union College, 1889; Lafayette College, 1899; Knox College, 1900, and Wesleyan University, 1901. SNOWDEN, A. Loudon:

Diplomat, orator, and writer; President of the Board of Commissioners of Fairmount Park; son of Dr. Isaac Wayne Snowden, Surgeon under General Jackson, and a descendant of Judge John Snowden, an early settler in Philadelphia and New Jersey, who held title to his lands in Philadelphia from the Duke of York, and a daughter of Archibald Louden, of Cumberland County. After a preliminary academic education he entered Jefferson College in Western Pennsylvania, from which he received the honorary degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Laws. Studied in the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania and was subsequently admitted to the bar. At the request of his uncle, Hon. James Ross Snowden, then Director of the United States Mint, he entered that institution as Register; then promoted to Chief Coinership. In 1877 was appointed Postmaster of Philadelphia by President Grant, but returned to the Mint service as Superintendent by the voluntary act of President Hayes, after having twice declined the appointment of Director of all the mints. He is an authority on all subjects relating to coins and coinage, and under his superintendence the whole mechanical appliances were brought up to the highest point of efficiency. His able plan and management of the great parade on Dec. 16, 1879, in honor of General Grant's return from his journey around the world, was a demonstration of his executive ability. Again, in 1887, he organized the great civic parade, under the auspices of the Constitutional Centennial Commission. At the outbreak of the Civil War he organized, partly clothed and fed for weeks a regiment, and was commissioned its Lieutenant Colonel. Subsequently participated in the skirmishes preliminary to the battle of Gettysburg as a member of the First City Troop of Philadelphia, and was commissioned its commanding officer in 1877. As an effective and eloquent public speaker he has but few equals. In 1889 was appointed Minister Resident and Consul-General to Greece, Roumania and Servia, by President Harrison. Shortly thereafter Congress raised the grade to that of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary. He was later voluntarily honored by a transfer from Athens to Madrid, where he successfully settled grave diplomatic questions. The Queen Regent conferred upon him the Grand Cordon of Isabella the Catholic, the King of Greece the Grand Cordon of the Saviour, and the King of Roumania the Grand Cordon of the Crown of Roumania. Colonel Snowden occupies a prominent position in the literary and social life of Philadelphia. Member American Philosophical Society, St. Andrews, Philadelphia, Club, State in Schuylkill, Union League, etc. He was married to Elizabeth Robinson, daughter of Isaac Robinson Smith of Philadelphia. Address, 1812 Spruce street, Philadelphia.

STERNBERGH, J. Hervey:

Manufacturer; born in Henrietta, Monroe County, N. Y., May 20, 1834, one of a family of twelve children, his father having been a farmer; of German and Dutch ancestry. His father lived to the age of eighty-six years. He was educated at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and lived there until he was thirty-one years old, serving for a number of years as General Passenger Agent of the railroad running through Saratoga. In 1865 he removed to Reading, Pa., to engage in the manufacture of iron nuts. Although he had no previous experience in mechanical industry, he invented and patented in 1867 an improved machine for the manufacture of hot pressed nuts, which is used to this day, and he has sold many of these machines to his competitors in the same business. He has also invented a surface-grinding machine for grinding hard metals. These two inventions brought him conspicuously before the industrial public and placed him in the front rank of manufacturers of hot-punched nuts. Many other improvements are the result of his inventive genius. Since 1867 he has added many additional departments to his works. On Feb. 6, 1891, his entire works in Reading were destroyed by fire, but in ten days he had resumed operations amid the débris, and the establishment was speedily rebuilt. In 1887 he established branch works in Kansas City, Mo.. The products of his establishments are shipped to all parts of the world. The Reading plant has been consolidated with the American Iron and Steel Manufacturing Company, of which Mr. Sternbergh is President. He was President for three years of the Reading Board of Trade; is ruling elder in the First Presbyterian Church of Reading, and for eighteen years was Superintendent of the Sunday school; is a Director of the Second National Bank of Reading, and has been President of the Kansas City Bolt and Nut Company since it was founded in 1887. In 1862 he married Miss Harriet M. May, of Southbridge, Mass., since deceased. They had five children, of whom one son and a daughter survive. His second wife was Miss Mary Candace Dodds, of North Hero, Vt. They have five children, three sons and two daughters. Address, Reading, Pa.

STETSON, John B.:

Manufacturer; born in Orange, N. J., May 5, 1830. His father was a hatter in a small way, and the son learned the same trade, and continued to work at it till 1865, when he decided to go to Philadelphia and attempt to do business for himself. Having no capital, he began in a very small way, making his hats in a single small room and hoarding his profits with great care. But his business soon grew, larger quarters were taken, and soon the Stetson hats became well known. In two years' time the firm of John B. Stetson & Co. had reached an annual business of $80,000. The growth continued and in time the Stetson hats, with his enterprise behind them, were selling everywhere, the value of the annual product reaching $2,500,000 a year. His workmen are members of various beneficial and other societies established by him for their advantage and social benefit, and the whole concern is carried on under the happiest and most generous conditions. Purchasing some property in De Land, Fla., he became interested in a struggling school there and came generously to its aid. This has grown into the John B. Stetson University, with buildings that cost more than $200,000 and a large faculty and enrollment of pupils. His spirit of charity is felt in the operations of several Philadelphia benevolent associations. Address, 1108 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; house, Elkins Park.

He was mustered in April 22, 1861, for three months, and his company was assigned to the Ninth Pennsylvania Infantry. His first promotion was that of Corporal. Two days before he was mustered out of the infantry he enrolled himself in a company of cavalry, and was made a Sergeant; this company was assigned to the First Pennsylvania Cavalry. He was then promoted Second Lieutenant, and a short time afterward First Lieutenant. He was detailed by Colonel Bayard as Acting Adjutant of the regiment, and in the spring of 1862 was appointed Acting Assistant Adjutant General of Bayard's brigade of cavalry, the first brigade of cavalry organized in the Army of the Pomotac or in the United States Army. When Col. Bayard was appointed Brigadier General, May 1, 1862, Thomas was appointed Captain. He commanded his squadron until April, 1863, when he was appointed one of the Assistant Inspectors of Cavalry, and assigned to the staff of Gen. D. McM. Gregg. He remained on staff duty until October, 1864, when he was ordered to commond his regiment, which then numbered five hundred men, mostly veterans. Col. Thomas's first engagement was at Falling Waters, Va., July 1, 1861. He was subsequently engaged at Dranesville, Va., Nov. 27, and Dec. 20, 1861; at Falmouth, Harrisonburg, Cross-Keys, Cedar Mountain, Brandy Station (slightly wounded), Beverly Ford, Waterloo Bridge, Thoroughfare Gap, Gainesville, Second Bull Run (slightly wounded), Rappahannock Station, and Fredericksburg, Dec. 11, 12, 1862. In 1863 was engaged in Stoneman's raid, Brandy Station, Rappahannock Station, Beverly Ford, Aldie, Upperville, Ashby's Gap, Middleburg, Gettysburg, second and third days (slightly wounded), Fairfield, Shepherdstown, Culpeper, Raccoon Ford, Jeffersonton, Warrenton, Sulphur Springs, Auburn (was severely injured), Mine Run, and New Hope Church. In 1864 was engaged at Todd's Tavern, Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Sheridan's raid, Yellow Tavern, Richmond Heights, Meadow Bridge, Haw's Shops, Barker's Mills, Cold Harbor, Trevillian Station, White House, St. Mary's Church, Jones's Bridge, Lee's Mills, Deep Bottom, Malvern and Gravel Hills, Strawberry Plains, Six-Mile House, Weldon Railroad, Reams's Station, Arthur's Swamp, Hatcher's Run, Davis Farm, Stony Creek Station, Bellefield, and Dabney's Mills. In 1865 was engaged at Dinwiddie Court House, Five Forks, Chamberlain's Bed, and from Paine's Cross-Roads to Jetersville. This was a running engagement from sunrise to sunset, and he led six charges against the enemy during the day, losing a horse killed in each charge. His command captured the celebrated battery of Armstrong field guns and eleven rebel battleflags. Five of the flags were turned over to the government, but six were kept by individuals. In the last charge at Jetersville on that day, April 5, 1865, he had his right foot shot away. At that time his lineal rank was that of Major. He was brevetted Colonel "for great gallantry in action." Gen. Davies, in his final report of the operations of his cavalry from March 28, to the surrender of Gen. Lee, says, "Major Thomas, commanding the First Pennsylvania Cavalry, was severely wounded while leading his command in a charge at Jetersville, April 5, 1865, and has lost a leg from the injury he received. Of this officer I cannot speak too highly. Foremost in every fight, brave and daring, yet possessed of most excellent judgment, his loss to the service is irreparable. In every action he was distinguished. The success of the attack on the train at Painesville is greatly due to him, and with subsequent movements of that day his services were most valuable." He was mustered out of service in August, 1865. He was appointed a Lieutenant of Cavalry in the United States Army, and was assigned to the Seventh United States Cavalry, but resigned his appointment on account of his wounds not having thoroughly healed. He has been a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion since October, 1866. Address, Fairmount Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

THOMPSON, Samuel Gustave:

Ex-Justice of Supreme Court of Pennsylvania; born in Franklin, Pa., in 1837; son of James Thompson, who was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania from 1865 till his death in 1874. His mother was the daughter of Justine Snowden, who escaped with her father from the massacre of Wyoming when five years of age. He was educated at Erie Academy, and in 1858, on the removal of his father to Philadelphia, he entered the Law Department of the University of Pennsylvania. He was admitted to the Philadelphia bar in 1861, and rapidly rose to a position of prominence in his profession, continuing for more than thirty years in active practice. Though well equipped for all branches of the law, his practice has been largely in important corporation cases. Up to his appointment to the bench, the only public office held by him was that of one of the Commissioners of Fairmount Park, to which he was elected in 1887. On March 2, 1893, without solicitation or knowledge by himself or friends, he was appointed by Governor Pattison to the bench of the Supreme Court to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of the Chief Justice. He filled this position with marked ability and public approbation, and in the ensuing election was unanimously nominated as the Democratic candidate for the position. He was defeated, however, by an adverse political majority. His term expired on Dec. 31, 1893, since which date he has been occupied in the practice of his profession. Address, 1630 Spruce St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THOMSON, William:

Physician, surgeon, soldier, author; born at Chambersburg, Jan. 28, 1833; son of Hon. Alex. Thomson, Judge Sixteenth Judicial District, and Jane (Graham) Thomson. Classical and literary education at Chambersburg Academy. Graduated from Jefferson Medical College 1855. Married Rebecca, daughter of William E. George, of Merion, Pa., in 1857. Assistant Surgeon United States Army, 1861. On duty with Army of Potomac before Bull Run, with which command he served in the field or at its base in Washington until the war closed. General Hospitals Alexandria, Va., and in 1862, Portsmouth. He joined Gen. McClellan's headquarters at Harrison's Landing and became assistant to Medical Director, continued throughout Antietam campaign and down to Fredericksburg, when he was ordered to take charge of the Douglas General Hospital, Washington. Three days before Antietam was at battle of South Mountain and was left in charge of field with over 3,000 Union and Confederate dead and wounded to care for. Returned to headquarters and aided in care and transportation of the thousands of men disabled at Antietam. The experience gained led to two lasting reforms proposed to and adopted by the Medical Director: a change in Medical Supplies; and an order for Division Hospitals to prevent any confusion during and after an engagement. After these proved of value in the Army of the Potomac they were made general throughout all the armies by order of the Secretary of War, and remained with little or no change until the armies were disbanded. In 1863 he became Surgeon in Charge Douglas Hospital, Washington. In 1864 he was made Medical Inspector Department, Washington, which contained in its various hospitals over 23,610 beds, and in which in 1864, 113,351 men were received, treated and transported. In 1866 he organized a hospital for the treatment of Cholera, and had charge of the Post Hospital. In 1867 he passed his second examination and was promoted to Captain and received two brevets for distinguished services, was sent to Louisiana and resigned in 1868. In 1861 he introduced the local use of creosote in gunshot wounds. Later he demonstrated the value of bromine in hospital gangrene at Douglas Hospital. He was warmly interested in Army Medical Museum, and in its first published catalogue he was the largest single contributor especially in descriptions and specimens of Osteomyelitis and wounds of the knee joint. With Dr. W. F. Norris he studied and utilized photography in surgical injuries and led to the establishment by the Surgeon General of the Photographic Bureau. Thomson and Norris were the first to make negatives by the wet process of the field of the microscope with high and low powers and led the way to the splendid successes obtained by the resources of the Surgeon General's office. These studies in optics dominated the futures of Thomson and Norris and lead to their pursuit, practice and teaching of Ophthalmic Surgery on their return to civil life. In March, 1868, he returned to Philadelphia and was warmly welcomed by election to its scientific societies, and to some of its hospitals. He has been a member of the American Medical Association, being delegated from the Medical Staff United States Army in 1863. He is a Fellow of College of Physicians of Philadelphia; a member of the Pathological Society, Academy of Natural Sciences, County Medical Society, Philosophical Society, and Ophthamological Society; Neurological Society (honorary), New York; International Ophthamological Congress; American Otological and Ophthamological Society; Vice President Ophthamological Section of International Medical Congress in 1876; physician to Church Home for Children; physician to the Hospital Protestant Episcopal Church; consulting surgeon to the Deaf and Dumb Institution. He decided to give his entire attention to the diseases of the eye, and in 1868 was elected assistant surgeon Wills Hospital; in 1872 surgeon; resigned 1877; re-elected surgeon 1896; resigned 1902 and was elected consulting surgeon. In 1868 he began to lecture on his chosen specialty at Wills, and continued in teaching there and at the Jefferson College until his resignation in 1897, a period of thirty years. In 1873 he established a daily clinic for eye and ear at Jefferson College and gave a clinical lecture every Friday. Elected ophthalmic surgeon of Jefferson College Hospital in 1877; soon after elected honorary Professor of Ophthalmology to the Jefferson College; in 1895 elected full Professor of Ophthalmology with seat in the Faculty; resigned in 1897 and was elected Emeritus Professor of Ophthalmology, which he now holds. Author of chapter on "Diseases of Eye" in fifth edition "System of Surgery" of Prof. S. D. Gross, 1872 (100 pages); "Test for Diagnosis of Ametropia with Instrument," 1872; "Ophthalmoscope in Diagnosis Intra Cranial Lesions," Mitchell and Thomson, 1873; "History of First Tumor of Brain Diagnosticated by its Aid in Philadelphia"; "Astigmatism as a Cause for Persistent Headaches Treated by Correction of Optical Defects," Mitchell and Thomson; "Connection Between Posterior Staphyloma and Astigmatism," 1875; "Correction of Conical Cornea by Convex Cylindrical Glasses"; "Rapid Diagnosis of Refraction with New Instrument," 1878; "System Adopted by Pennsylvania Railroad in 1880 for Examination of Employees for Color-Blindness, Vision and Hearing, with Instruments, Color Stick, Test Letters, etc." (still in use and adopted by other roads controlling over 100,000 miles of track); "Supplement to Nettleship on Diseases of Eye" (giving full description of above); edited ophthalmic part of "Annual of Medical Sciences" in its first year, 1889; "New Wool Test for Detecting Color-blindness," 1894; chapter on "Surgery of Eye" in American Test Book of Surgery, 1892; "Normal Color Sense and Detection of Color-blindness (two chapters in "Norris and Oliver's System, Diseases of the Eye," 1893-1897); "Relations of Ophthalmology to Practical Medicine"; "Detection of Color-blindness with Lantern," (to aid wool tests), 1901; "Use of Circle of Diffusion for Correcting Anetropia with an Instrument," W. T. and A. G. Thomson. This is a partial list of publications, a weekly public lecture before large clinics giving better opportunity of reporting each progressive step. There are eight new instruments which have been accepted as useful. Chairman Section of Ophthalmology, College of Physicians, 1901-1902; now Emeritus Professor Ophthalmology Jefferson; consulting surgeon Wills Hospital; ophthalmic surgeon Pennsylvania Railroad; Companion Loyal Legion. VANDERGRIFT, Jacob Jay:

Oil trade operator; born in Pittsburg in 1827; his business career began at the age of fifteen in the steamboat service, and he was a Captain before the age of twenty-five. The method of towing barges which has since been used in the western river traffic was introduced by him. When the war broke out Captain Vandergrift was steamboating on the Ohio River, and was the owner of the famous Red Fox, which the Government chartered and which was sunk near Cairo. In 1863 he removed to Oil City to oversee his oil-shipping business, and here became a partner of Daniel Bushnell in oil production. He subsequently had other partners, and was the leading promoter of the Anchor Oil Company and President of the Forest and Washington Oil Company. As the senior member of the firm of Vandergrift & Forman. The marvelous advance in the modes of transporting oil was mainly due to him. During the existence of the United Pipe Lines he was their President, and also of the United Division of the National Transit after the consolidation in 1884. The Oil City Trust Company, one of the largest banking institutions in Pennsylvania, was founded by him. On his removal to Pittsburg in 1881 he founded the Keystone Bank and the Pittsburg Trust Company, and was elected President of both; he also took an active part in organizing the Seaboard Bank of New York, the Argyle Savings Bank of Petrolia, and the Oil Exchange of Pittsburg, which he has provided with spacious quarters in the massive Vandergrift Building. WALTON, B. S.:

President of the Pennsylvania Mortgage Investment Company. Address, Westchester, Chester County, Pa.

WALTON, Frederick M.:

Scarf manufacturer; born in Fairview, Burlington County, N. J., Aug. 28, 1849. His mother, of English birth and a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, founded in 1845 the Holy Trinity Church of Fairview. He was educated in the schools of Burlington and Beverly, N. J., and began his business life in the Philadelphia house of DeCoursey, Lafourcade & Co., dealers in men's furnishing goods; after remaining there for five years and gaining a thorough knowledge of the business, he engaged in the manufacture of scarfs, as an article of men's wear that promised a profitable business; his trade in this specialty rapidly increased, growing from fifty dozens of scarfs a week at the time of starting to the large aggregate of five thousand dozens a week by May 1, 1894. The firm, F. M. Walton & Co., occupies a large establishment and employs many hands, chiefly young ladies selected for their character and deportment, regarding which he is very particular. No cheap goods are made and the Walton scarf has a well deserved reputation. Mr. Walton is a member of the Union League, the Manufacturers' Club, and of the Old Guard of the First Pennsylvania Regiment. He takes much of his recreation in the driving of thoroughbred horses. His mother died in 1892, and in honor of her memory he replaced the church she had founded at Fairview with a handsome stone edifice of English Gothic style of architecture. Address, The St. James, Philadelphia, Pa.

WALTON, Henry F.:

Member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives from Philadelphia, for the second time Speaker of the House of Representatives; born in Stroudsburg, Monroe County, Pa., Oct. 2, 1858, and represents the Twenty-third District of Philadelphia. When but a year old his parents removed to that city, in the public schools of which and under private tutors he received his early education, followed by his entrance into the law office of Hon. Wayne MacVeagh and George Tucker Bispham. Shortly afterward he was appointed Assistant Librabrarian of the law library by Mr. Bispham. In 1876 he was registered as a law student in the latter's office and in the meantime was a member and officer of the Law Academy. He was admitted to practice at the bar of Philadelphia County, Oct. 4, 1879, two days after he had attained his majority, and immediately entered the law office of Francis Rawle. Charles F. Warwick, City Solicitor of Philadelphia, appointed Mr. Walton as one of his assistants in April, 1884, and retained his services until he was elected to the House of Representatives in 1890, in recognition of the work he did in the ranks of the Republican Party, to which he has always been ardently attached. In 1892 his constituents in the Twenty-third District, which Mr. Walton had represented, re-elected him and in 1894 again honored him with re-election. The Philadelphia delegation in 1893 pressed him for the Speakership of the House, but on the day of the Republican caucus he withdrew as a candidate for the office and in the caucus placed in nomination Mr. Caleb C. Thompson, of Warren, who was elected. In 1893 he was appointed Chairman of the Committee on Judiciary General and served on other committees which had important work to perform. Mr. Walton was one of the prominent members of the House and in 1895 was elected Speaker of that body without Republican opposition. In 1898 he was appointed Solicitor to the Sheriff of Philadelphia County, which position he resigned because of his election for the fourth time to the Legislature. The ability with which he presided over the House in 1895 suggested him as a candidate for his old place in 1903, and when the Republican caucus met all the candidates for the office had withdrawn, and Mr. Walton was the second time complimented with a unanimous nomination by his party. At this session he made a great record for physical endurance, the dispatch of business and the maintenance of order. He was punctual in his attendance and never left the chair when legislation of importance was under consideration. It is no flattery to him to declare that no presiding officer of the House ever displayed more signal ability in the responsible position. Mr. Walton is a member of the Union League of Philadelphia, and a member and ex-President of the Five o'Clock Club. He is a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the Penn Club and a score of other prominent societies and organizations. As a campaigner he has shown great effectiveness. He was married in 1882 to Miss Ella G. Norman and is the head of a family of four daughters and three sons. Residence, Torresdale, Pa; office address, Real Estate Trust Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

WALTON, John M.:

City Controller; born in Stroudsburg, Pa., in 1842; educated at the Moravian School, Lititz, Pa.; went to Philadelphia with his father, who became Treasurer in the United States Mint; became an officer in the Fourth United States Cavalry, at first as Second Lieutenant; in 1871, First Lieutenant; in 1878 retired as Captain in consequence of disability received in the service. Making Philadelphia his place of residence, he was elected to the City Council in 1882, and served in that body till 1895, being a member of the Highway, Survey and Finance Committees. While a Republican, he was not a partisan, and was endorsed by the Committee of One Hundred and the Committee of Fifty. He withdrew from the Council to accept the office of City Controller, to which he was elected in 1895, and to which he has been successively re-elected, performing the duties of the office with high financial ability and unquestioned integrity. Captain Walton is a number of the Union League, the Grand Army, the Society of Veterans of Indian Wars, the Masonic Order and several political clubs. He has been President of the Hamilton Whist Club. Address, 4205 Chester Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

WALTZ, William L.:

Lawyer; born in 1880; admitted to the bar of Lycoming County, Pa., 1902. Member of Select Council, Williamsport, Pa. Address, Willamsport, Pa.

WANAMAKER, John:

Merchant; born in Philadelphia, July 11, 1838. He was descended on his father's side from the Palatines who left Germany during the religious persecution of 1730-1740, and on his mother's side from the Huguenots who left France for the same reason. His father was a brickmaker, and the boy during his school life had his share of work to do in the brick yard; he left school at fourteen years of age and became an errand boy in a book store at $1.50 per week; then his ability as a salesman soon augmented his salary to $4.00 per week, and he took advantage of the opportunities of improving his education offered by the Young Men's Christian Association; his activity in this association brought him the position of paid secretary in 1857, but he resigned in 1861 to found a clothing business with his brother-in-law, Nathan Brown, at Sixth and Market Streets, which is still the clothing firm of Wanamaker & Brown; they began in a very modest way, but the business prospered, the ill health of Mr. Brown throwing the burden of the labor on Mr. Wanamaker. In 1868, when Mr. Brown died, the business was firmly established, and the house widely known from its liberal method of advertising; in 1869 a new establishment was opened in Chestnut street, under the title of John Wanamaker & Co., his brother Samuel being in charge; by 1871, Oak Hall as the Market street store was called, had spread over a space formerly occupied by forty-five tenants, and in 1875 Mr.

Wanamaker purchased the old Pennsylvania Railroad freight depot at Thirteenth and Market streets, where he opened a clothing, hat and shoe store in 1876, and in 1877 extended it into a general dry goods store, embracing almost all classes of retail goods; the great success of the new establishment was due to the "new kind of a store" upon a system never known before which its proprietor began, which brought him fortune in the end. His powers as a business organizer were extraordinary, and the Grand Depot in time grew to be a vast and stirring mart of trade, all under his close supervision. In the conduct of his business he introduced the profit-sharing system, and is said in the years 1888-1889 to have distributed more than $100,000 among his employees. The Philadelphia store was followed, some years after its establishment, by a similar one in the A. T. Stewart building in New York, which has become equally prosperous. In 1904 he began to rebuild his Philadelphia store on a large scale, replacing the old building with one twelve stories high and covering a city square. He has shown himself very active in other directions; he lent important aid to the war-time Sanitary Fair in Logan square, was one of the organizers of the Christian Commission, and took part in various charitable movements; he served efficiently on the Finance Committee of the Centennial Exposition of 1876, lent his aid to the William Penn anniversary celebration of 1882, and was prominent in the movement for a pure water supply in 1886-1887. A member of the Presbyterian Church, his talent for organization showed itself strikingly in the Bethany Sunday School, of which he took charge in 1858 with, twenty-seven scholars, but which rapidly outgrew its accommodations, and in time became one of the largest in the country, with over 2,600 students; he aided the Young Men's Christian Association in erecting its new building and became its President, and is connected with the Williamson Trade School and other associations. He declined to become a candidate for Mayor and representative on the Republican ticket when offered him, but he took an active part in the 1888 Presidential campaign, and accepted the position of Postmaster General in President Harrison's Cabinet; this he filled very efficiently during the four years of the Administration, 1889-1893, handling its affairs with his great business acumen, and introducing important improvements and economies in the service. At a later date he became very active in independent Republican politics, vigorously combating M. S. Quay in the contest for the United States Senatorship and making many trenchant and effective speeches. On the whole, he has made himself a power in the business world and has played an important part in administrative and political affairs.

Congressman (Republican), of Norristown; born on a farm in North Coventry, Chester County, Pa., March 5, 1852; his ancestors (Mennonites and Brethren) came from the Rhine country of Switzerland and Germany, and about 1717 settled in Eastern Pennsylvania; son of George and Rebecca P. Wanger; attended the schools of North Coventry and Pottstown. In 1870 he was a clerk in the Prothonotary's office at West Chester; studied law at Norristown, Pa., in the office of Franklin March; in 1872 he was appointed Deputy Prothonotary of Montgomery County; in 1875 admitted to the bar, and soon afterward entered upon the practice of his profession; since 1889 associated with Irvin P. Knipe in the law firm of Wanger & Knipe; admitted to practice in the United States Supreme Court. In 1877 elected Burgess of Norristown; in 1880 and again in 1886, elected District Attorney; since 1892, Congressman for Eighth District and has been a member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and Chairman of the Committee on Expenditures in the Post Office Department. He is prominent in Masonic circles, having been Grand Commander of Knights Templar of Pennsylvania, 1894-1895. Member of the societies of Odd Fellows and Red Men, and of the Ersine Tennis and of country clubs, and of the Union League, Philadelphia. In 1884 he married Miss Emma C. Titlow. Address, Main and Stanbridge Sts., Norristown, Pa.

WANNER, Atreus:

City Superintendent of York Public Schools; born Sept. 26, 1852, in Washingtonville, Ohio; was graduated at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., 1873. Married, June 21, 1882, to Miss Clara J. Eckert of Gordonville, Lancaster County, Pa. Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Contributor on local geology and archæology to government and other publications. Address, York, Pa.

WANNER, Peter A.:

Attorney-at-law; born near Kutztown, Berks County, Pa., Dec. 1, 1840; in boyhood he worked on his father's farm, and had scanty school opportunities, yet made such use of them that he was able to serve as teacher in 1856, 1857 and 1858. In 1859 he entered Union Seminary, New Berlin, Pa. In 1860 he became a student and teacher in Fairview Seminary at Kutztown, entered Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster in 1862, graduating in 1865. He was admitted to the bar at Lancaster two months after graduating; in other words, he crowded a college and legal course into three years, and began to practice law at Reading, Pa., during the latter part of 1865, and soon acquired a lucrative business. He became prominent in the Democratic Party, by whom he was elected District Attorney for Berks County in 1871; he became County Solicitor after his term had expired; was a candidate for Congress in 1878 against Hon. Hiester Clymer and came within a few hundred votes of defeating him at the primaries. In 1879 he became interested in the Mellert Foundry and Machine Company, also in the Reading Foundry Company in 1885, and made a great deal of money in connection with these concerns. In 1893 the concerns became heavy losers, involving Mr. Wanner to a very large extent financially, so that he was compelled to go back again to the bar in 1902, in which he has since made the best possible efforts to obtain again a portion of his former practice. He has also been largely interested in the construction and maintenance of waterworks of late years, having been the President off and on of quite a number of them. He was also a candidate again for District Attorney during the spring of this year (1904), but was defeated after a vigorous and interesting campaign. Address, Reading, Pa.

WEAVER, John:

Mayor of Philadelphia; born in England in 1862; educated partly in that country and partly in Philadelphia, whither his parents moved when he was eight years old. His school life ended at thirteen years of age, when he became an errand boy in an office, but while working as a clerk in various stores he studied shorthand writing, and learned it sufficiently to take a position as a law stenographer; while thus engaged he read law diligently, and also took a night course of study at Temple College. During this period he became stenographer and recorder to the Law Academy, of which, later on, he was successively Treasurer, Vice President, and President. His admission to the bar, thirteen years ago, was followed by an active practice, his knowledge of business aiding to bring many commercial and corporation cases and the reputation of one of the brightest and most successful men at the Philadelphia bar. His oratorical prowess helped him not only in the courts, but won him a standing as a ready and efficient political speaker. In 1901 he was given the nomination of the Republican Party for District Attorney on the double basis of honesty and ability, and he was duly elected. His active and unpartisan service in this office made him very popular, and in 1903, when there was a vigorous public demand for an honest and independent city executive, he was selected by the Republican leaders in response to the public demand, and was elected Mayor by a large majority. Entering office unpledged to party control, he has done his utmost to give the city an honest and progressive administration and to check the long prevailing reign of political venality. Mayor Weaver is a member of the Bar Association of Pennsylvania, of the American Bar Association, of the Board of Censors, of the Lawyers' Club, and Secretary of the Governing Committee of the Law Association; he is a Commodore of the Yacht Club of Seaside Park, N. J. Address, City Hall, Philadelphia, Pa.

WEISS, Geo. W.:

County Superintendent; born in Milford Township, Bucks County, Pa. His father died when he was but sixteen years old; he commenced to teach school when he was seventeen years old; he attended Freeland Seminary; afterward attended the Millersville State Normal School, from which institution he was graduated with honors in 1870. He was offered the principalship of the Port Carbon schools immediately after his graduation, which he accepted and filled very satisfactorily for seven years; in 1877 he resigned at Port Carbon and accepted a similar position in Schuylkill Haven, which position he acceptably filled for four years. He was then a candidate for the County Superintendency of Schuylkill County for the first time, and was elected, which position he has held since. In 1876 he was married to Harriet Henderson of Port Carbon. Before his election as County Superintendent he gave instruction at six local Normal Schools, which were well attended by teachers of Schuylkill County. He had twenty years' experience in teaching before his election as County Superintendent. He was a member of the Committee of Permanent Certificates for eight years. The public schools of Schuylkill County under his supervision are unexcelled by any county in the State. During his administration the Directors' Association of Schuylkill County, the first organization of its kind in the State, was organized. He instituted Arbor Day two years before Arbor Day was instituted by the State Superintendent. He is well thought of by all with whom he comes in contact. Address, Schuylkill Haven, Pa.

WEISS, John H.:

WESTINGHOUSE, George:

Inventor of the celebrated Westinghouse air brake; was born at Central Bridge, Schoharie County, N. Y., on the 6th of October, 1846; his parents were George and Emeline Vedder Westinghouse. The father's ancestors came from Germany and settled in Massachusetts and Vermont before the Revolution; the mother's were Dutch-English. Mr. Westinghouse's father was an inventor, who, in 1856, removed with his family to Schenectady, New York, where he established the Schenectady Agricultural Works. The boy attended the public and high schools of the town, spending much of his leisure time, after studies, in his father's machine shop, and the experience derived therefrom enabled him, before he was fifteen, to invent and make a rotary engine, and also to pass, at an early age, the examination for the position of Assistant Engineer in the United States Navy. From June, 1863, to June, 1865, he served, first in the army, and afterward in the navy. At the close of the war he tendered his resignation, and was honorably discharged August 1, 1865. On his return he entered Union College, where he remained till the close of his sophomore year, when he abadoned his classical studies and entered upon active life, to find a wider scope for his inventive genius. In 1865, he invented a device for replacing railroad cars upon the track. Going to Troy one day, a delay, caused by a collision between two freight trains, suggested to Mr. Westinghouse the idea that a brake under the control of the engineer might have prevented the accident, and in that moment one of the most useful and beneficent devices known to mankind was born. Among the devices which his mind suggested, was a brake actuated by the cars closing upon each other. His first plan proving impracticable, the use of compressed air suggested itself, being free from many of the objections found in using steam. Drawings of the air-pump, brake cylinders and valves were made, but considerable time elapsed before a practical trial of the brake was obtained. The first patent was issued April 13, 1869, and The Westinghouse Air-Brake Company was formed on the 20th of July following. The first orders received for the apparatus were from the Michigan Central Railway and the Chicago & Northwestern Railway. Many changes and improvements were being made in the brake all the while, the business flourished, and the manufacturing works, begun in 1869, were completed in 1870. In 1871 Mr. Westinghouse went abroad to introduce the air-brake in England—a difficult problem, as the trains in Europe had hand-brakes upon only what were known as "brake-vans," there being no brakes upon the other vehicles. Not only did this require the spending of seven years in Europe, between 1871 and 1882, but it taxed his inventive ability considerably to meet the new conditions of railroad practice. In the meantime, Mr. Westinghouse invented the "automatic" feature of the brake which overcame the imperfections in the first form, and removed the danger from the parting of trains on steep grades. In 1886, he invented the "quick-action" brake, the improvement being made in what is known as the "triple-valve." By this improved valve it became practicable to apply all the brakes on a train of fifty freight cars in two seconds. The automatic and quick-action brakes are regarded by experts as far surpassing the original brake in ingenuity and inventive genius, being not mere improvements, but distinct inventions of the highest class, unique and remarkable. In 1883, Mr. Westinghouse became interested in the operation of railway signals and switches by compressed air, and developed and patented the system now manufactured by the Union Switch and Signal Company. The "Pneumatic Interlocking Switch and Signal Apparatus," whereby all the signals and switches are operated from a given point, using compressed air as the motive power, and electricity to bring that power into operation, has been successfully introduced in Boston, Jersey City, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis and many other places. Mr. Westinghouse was among the first to foresee the advantages of alternating current as a means of transmitting electricity over long distances, and the fight to introduce this system was carried on by him single-handed against incredible opposition. The induction motor, the invention of which was the outcome of the genius of Nikola Tesla, was put on a commercial footing by Mr. Westinghouse. Among his accomplishments in the electrical field may be mentioned the unit switch system of multiple control for the simultaneous operation and control from one common point of all the motors in a train; and the new single phase motor for street railway service, this use of electricity being heretofore confined to direct current. The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company was organized in 1886 for the manufacture of electrical apparatus, and the business of this company has developed so rapidly as to now necessitate the employment at its East Pittsburg plant of about ten thonsand hands. The electrical business developed by Mr. Westinghouse has found its way to foreign territory, and extensive works have been established at Trafford Park, Manchester, England, and at Le Havre, France. Besides the work already described Mr. Westinghouse has taken a foremost part in the development of the gas engine and the steam turbine, both of which are built by The Westinghouse Machine Company, at East Pittsburg, Pa. The Sawyer-Man incandescent lamp, the Nernst lamp and the Cooper-Hewitt mercury vapor lamp were all put on a commercial basis by Mr. Westinghouse. He was also the moving spirit in the exploitation of natural gas in the Pittsburg district, his special merit coming from working out its piping over long distances, which was at first thought impossible. He is President of almost all of about thirty companies, with which he is connected, the most of which bear his name. Prominent among these companies are The Westinghouse Air Brake Company, Wilmerding, Pa.; The Westinghouse Brake Company, Limited, London, England; Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, East Pittsburg, Pa.; The British Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, Limited, London, England; The Westinghouse Machine Company. East Pittsburg, Pa., The Union Switch & Signal Company, Swissvale, Pa.; Pittsburg Meter Company, East Pittsburg, Pa.; Canadian Westinghouse Company, Limited, Hamilton, Canada; Nernst Lamp Company, Pittsburg, Pa. The combined capital of these companies is about $100,000,000. Was married Aug. 8, 1867, at Brooklyn, N. Y., to Marguerite Erskine Walker. They have one son, George Westinghouse, Jr., who is a student at Yale University. Mr. Westinghouse has residences at Pittsburg, Pa., Washington, D. C., and Lenox, Mass.

YOUNG, James Rankin:

Journalist and legislator; born in Philadelphia, March 10, 1847; brother of John Russell Young, the late famous newspaper correspondent, a founder and one of the Presidents of the Philadelphia Union League, and ex-Minister to China. Mr. Young was educated in the public schools of Philadelphia, being a school boy at the time of the invasion of Pennsylvania by General Lee, when he ran away and joined the Gray Reserves. He and his classmates who accompanied him were discharged as too young, but he tried to enlist again, and finally became clerk to Colonel J. B. Sheridan, Paymaster of the Army; he remained with him till after the war, and in 1865 entered the field of journalism as a reporter. In 1865-1866 he made a tour of the South, writing letters to the New York Tribune, and on his return became one of the founders of the Philadelphia Evening Star, of which he afterward became owner and remained so during its existence. In June, 1866, he succeeded Carl Schurz as Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, a position in which he remained for five years, withdrawing from it at length to devote his attention to the Evening Star, to which he wrote for many years a series of striking letters over the signature of "S. M." There has been nothing more graceful, attractive and informing than these letters in the history of Washington correspondence, and their reputation became national. In December, 1873, Mr. Young was elected Chief Executive Clerk of the Senate, a position which he held till 1879, after which he was made Chief Clerk of the Department of Justice; he was re-elected Chief Clerk of the Senate in 1883, and held the position till the office was abolished in 1892. He attended all the Republican National Conventions from 1864 onward. In 1897 he was elected a member of Congress to represent the Fourth Pennsylvania District, and served for three terms, his membership ending on March 4, 1903. He was Vice President of the commission to locate the positions of Pennsylvania troops in the battles of Chickamauga, Chattanooga and Lookout Mountain. Y., Harrisburg Academy, and the old Tenant School at Hartsville, Bucks County, Pa., where he prepared for Yale College. He did not take a collegiate course, however, as both his parents had become invalids, and for their sakes he returned to Aaronsburg. For several years he was engaged in the mercantile business, and read law in the office of the late Andrew G. Curtin, the great war Governor of Pennsylvania, at Bellefonte, Pa., and was later admitted to practice. He labored for a number of years to secure assistance for the building of the railroad between Lewisburg and Bellefonte, which is now in successful operation, and is a Director in the same. In his earlier life he was a member of Gen. George Buchanan's staff, and still later a member of the staff of Governor A. G. Curtin. Col. Coburn's name has been more conspicuously brought into public notice through his connection with the First National Bank of Bellefonte, as its President more particularly, and as a Director. Republican in politics. Member of the Presbyterian Church. Address, Bellefonte, Pa.

FOCHT, Benjamin K.:

Editor and capitalist; born in New Bloomfield, Pa., March 12, 1863; son of Rev. David H. Focht, a Lutheran minister, author and orator of note; educated at Bucknell Academy, State College and Selinsgrove Institute. At fourteen years of age he entered a printing office as an apprentice, developing a literary ability, which he manifested at seventeen by writing the salutatory for the first issue of the Lewisburg Local News, a paper founded by him in 1882. The paper, under his energetic and able control, has grown into a large and valuable plant, while Mr. Focht is known as one of the strongest editorial writers in the State. He early became active in Republican politics, becoming prominent as a "stalwart" before he was of age; in 1889 he was elected a delegate to the State Convention; he took an active part in many conventions and party conferences, and in 1890 was a candidate for the Legislature; defeated, he tried again in 1892 and won, winning again in 1894 ad 1896; in 1900 he was elected to the State Senate. He was prominent in financing important railroad properties in Pennsylvania and New York State in which he is largely interested. He is actively associated with the Transit Finance Company of Philadelphia and New York. Address, Lewisburg, Pa.

GIMBEL, Ellis A.:

Merchant; son of Adam Gimbel, a native of Bavaria, Germany, who came to the United States in 1839 and by industry and enterprise built up a very large mercantile business in the West, having an extensive parent store in Vincennes, Ind., and similar stores in neighboring cities. He went to Philadelphia in 1865 as resident purchasing agent for his stores, and there his sons were educated in the public schools. They afterward took charge of their father's Western stores and added to their number, developing a chain of thriving stores in Milwaukee and other prominent cities. In 1887 Adam Gimbel retired from business, and his sons succeeded him, four of them, Ellis A., Isaac, Charles and Benjamin, some years later engaging in the department store business in Philadelphia under the firm name of Gimbel Brothers in the large stores at Ninth and Market Streets previously occupied by Granville, Haines & Co. and Wood, Brown & Co. The business grew so extensive that large purchases of property were made and the establishment extended to Eighth Street, occupying the greater part of a city square and claimed to possess more floor area than any similar establishment in the world. Ellis Gimbel is senior member of the firm and is actively engaged in the furtherance of its interests. Address, 906 North Broad St., Philadelphia, Pa.

GRISCOM, Clemont Acton:

President of the International Navigation Company; born in Philadelphia, March 15, 1841; son of Dr. John D. Griscom, and a descendant on his mother's side of Thomas Lloyd, Deputy Governor of Pennsylvania and President of its Council from 1684 to 1693. His brother William W. Griscom is well known as the inventor of the important electrical device known as the Griscom motor and for his experiments in the improvement of storage batteries for street car use. Mr. Griscom was educated in the Philadelphia public schools and in a Friends' Academy, and in 1857 became clerk in the shipping house of Peter Wright & Sons. Here his unusual energy and ability brought him rapid advancement, and in 1863, when but twenty-two years of age, he was admitted to membership in the firm. The year before he married Frances C. Biddle, and one of his sons, Clement A. Biddle, Jr., now occupies a prominent place in the International Navigation Company. Mr. Griscom's importance in the firm grew as the older members gradually left the direction of affairs to his active hands, and when the International Navigation Company was founded by the firm in 1871 he was made its Vice President. This company bought out the Inman Line, renaming it the American Line, to whose vessels it added the great steamers City of Paris and City of New York, built for it by the Cramp shipbuilding firm; it also obtained nearly all the stock of the Red Star Line, a Belgian corporation, of the International Navigation Company, Limited, of Liverpool, and of the Empire Transportation Company of Seattle. Mr. Griscom succeeded James A. Wright as President of the company in 1888, a position which he still holds, the name of the company having been changed in September, 1902, to the International Mercantile Marine Company, and its capital increased so as to obtain control of the White Star and several other lines. This has been accomplished, and the company now handles an immense fleet of ocean steamers. In addition to his shipping interests Mr. Griscom is a Director of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, the United States Steel Company, the William Cramp Ship and Engine Building Company, the Electric Company of America, the National Transit Company, the United Gas Improvement Company, several banking and trust companies, and other corporations. He has been President of the Societies of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers since their foundation. His club connections are with the Philadelphia Club, Rittenhouse Club, Union League, Farmers' Club, and the New York Yacht Club. He resides in a handsome rural mansion, "Dolobran," near the Haverford station of the Pennsylvania Railroad, where he devotes himself to farming interests as a relief from business cares; is interested in stock-raising, and is fond of driving, his love of horses being shared by his children. Address, Haverford, Pa.; office, 307 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HAAS, John A. W.:

Educator; President of Muhlenberg College; born in Philadelphia, Aug. 31, 1862; was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, 1883; A. M., D. D. from Thiel College, Greenville, Pa.; was graduated from Lutheran Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, 1887; studied in University of Leipzig, Germany, 1887-1888; Secretary of the General Council's Committee on Education; co-editor of "The Lutheran Cyclopedia." Author of "St. Mark in the Lutheran Commentary," "Bible Literature," and "Biblical Criticism." Founder and organizer of the Lutheran New Testament Society of New York. Lutheran pastor in New York sixteen years. Address, Allentown, Pa.

HERSHMAN, Oliver S.:

Editor and publisher; born July 2, 1859; son of Henry Logan and Lucy Buhoup Hershman. His father was killed in the Civil War in 1864. He attended the public schools until fourteen years of age, when he entered the business office of The Pittsburg Evening Telegraph; he continued his studies at night, fitting himself with a business education, continuing with the paper, which was consolidated in 1884 with The Chronicle under the name of The Chronicle Telegraph, until 1900. During his career with The Chronicle Telegraph he had acquired large holdings in the company, and had become its Secretary, Treasurer and General Manager. In the latter part of 1900 he sold The Chronicle Telegraph and purchased The Pittsburg Press and Pittsburg Daily News, consolidating the two under the name of The Pittsburg Press. A company was formed, which is mainly owned by him, and in addition to being the editor and publisher of the paper, he is the President and Treasurer of the corporation. Address, Pittsburg Press, Pittsburg, Pa.

Educator; born in Washington, D. C., Dec. 20, 1841; her father, William W. Irwin, a resident of Pittsburg, was a member of Congress from the Pittsburg district at the time of her birth; on the side of her mother, Sophia A (Bache) Irwin, she is a great granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin. She was educated in private schools; taught for a time in the school of Mrs. Hoffman of New York, afterward opening a young ladies' day school in DeLancey Place, Philadelphia. This establishment was conducted for more than twenty years with great success and was the most fashionable young ladies' school in Philadelphia. In 1894 Miss Irwin was offered the position of Dean of Radcliffe College, Cambridge, Mass., which post she has held since September of that year. In 1900 she was a Commissioner from Massachusetts to the Paris Exposition. She has been honored with a degree from the Western University of Pennsylvania, and in 1898 was given the degree of LL.D. by the University of Pennsylvania. Address, Cambridge, Mass.

MacVEAGH, Wayne:

Lawyer, ex-Ambassador and cabinet official; born in the vicinity of Phoenixville, Chester County, Pa., April 19, 1833. He was educated at Yale College, graduating in 1853. Subsequent college honors accorded him were those of LL. D. from Amherst College in 1881 and from the University of Pennsylvania in 1897. Selecting the law as his profession, he went through the necessary course of study and was admitted to the bar of his native county in 1856. Mr. MacVeagh soon proved himself a lawyer of marked ability, and, in 1859, was elected District Attorney of Chester County, holding this position till 1864. During this interval he served as an infantry Captain in 1862 and a cavalry Captain in 1863, in the forces raised to repel the invasions of Pennsylvania. An active member of the Republican Party, he became Chairman of its State Committee in 1863. In the succeeding years his standing in the party grew very prominent, and in 1870 his services were rewarded by the post of United States Minister to Turkey. He served till 1871, was a member of the Constitutional Convention of Pennsylvania, 1872-1874, and in 1877 was chosen by President Hayes, head of the commission sent to Louisiana to bring about a friendly settlement of the party contests there. In 1881 Mr. MacVeagh was appointed Attorney General of the U. S. in President Garfield's cabinet, but on the accession of President Arthur he resigned and returned to his legal business, making Philadelphia his seat of practice. During his residence in Philadelphia he served as Chairman of the Civil Service Reform Association of that city and also of the Indian Rights Association. In the Presidential campaign of 1892 he changed his political allegiance, supporting Cleveland for the Presidency. On the accession of Cleveland he was appointed Ambassador to Italy, and represented the United States at Rome till the close of the administration. Since 1897 he has been engaged in the practice of the law in Washington. Office address, Sun Building, 1315 F St. N. W., Washington, D. C.

NEW PHOTOGRAVURE BOOKS

India, Past and Present

By C. H. FORBES-LINDSAY

Illustrated with 50 photogravures. 2 vols. Crown 8vo.

Cloth extra, gilt tops; in cloth box, net, $4.00. (By mail 40 cents additional.)

THERE are many books about India, but for the most part they tell the reader too little or else are technical works or bulky ponderous volumes. Mr. Forbes-Lindsay's work, "India, Past and Present," within a moderate compass supplies a comprehensive view of one of the most ancient and interesting countries in the world, with accurate information as to its past and present condition and picturesque glimpses of its fascinating history.

It is written from a personal knowledge acquired during the author's years of residence in different parts of the Indian Empire supplemented by a thorough study of the works of the best authorities. There is no other popular work covering the same ground, and the reader will acquire a general idea of the whole country in its physical characteristics; its diversified and often magnificent scenery; its remarkable temples and palaces and other buildings; its antiquities; the many races by which it has been peopled; and its extremely interesting history.

Japan and Her People

By ANNA C. HARTSHORNE

WHO'S WHO IN NEW YORK, STATE AND CITY

Is a handsome volume of 800 pages, strongly bound in buckram, containing authentic biographies of resident New Yorkers who are leaders and representatives in various departments of worthy human achievement. To this are added sketches of every Army and Navy officer born in or appointed from New York and now serving; of all the Congressmen from the State, and of all State Senators and Judges, and of all Ambassadors, Ministers and Consuls appointed from the United States. It has been the aim of the Editors to include only such names as have valid claim to recognition.

The book has been laid out on lines sufficiently broad, it is hoped, to make it invaluable as a work of reference, and interesting to those who find in "every Biography a page of History."

SCOPE OF THE WORK.

Some idea of the field covered may be had by a glance at the following partial list: There are lives of leading Architects, Artists, Authors, Civil Engineers, Clergymen, Bankers, Brokers, Lawyers, Merchants, Physicians; Leaders in the World of Society and Prominent Men of Affairs.

An especially valuable detail is the permanent address, which is furnished in every case.

VALUE AND USE.

WHO'S WHO IN NEW YORK is designed to supplement a London publication, which furnishes biographic data of prominent men the world over, and a Chicago publication which covers the same ground, more in detail, for the whole United States. Obviously the wider range of these books preclude the mention of many names that have a definite and important interest when considered as factors in the life of this State.

This local information, so to call it, has never up to this time been gathered within the limits of a single volume. And those who have had occasion to look for such information realize how difficult it is to secure. It is to be found only in County histories of dubious veracity; in newspaper clippings, difficult of access; in family histories, overloaded with unimportant trivialities, or it is not to be found at all in many instances. But, worst of all, when the alleged facts are gathered together they are found to be conflicting, and the vital element of authenticity is lacking. "Who's Who in New York" is authentic. The information has been gathered at first hand. It may be relied upon.

EDITORS of newspapers and magazines do not need to have the advantages of such a book explained to them. They will not fail to recognize them even from this brief synopsis. Bankers, Brokers, Insurance men and Corporation managers will find that they can save hours of labor and correspondence in ascertaining such facts about men—5,000 of them—as will be valuable to them in the conduct of their business. It is preeminently a book for Public and Private Libraries, Hotels and Clubs, and its pages are replete with interest for Authors and Students of Life. Government and State Officials and Leaders in the Politics of the day should have such a work at their very elbow. To Insurance men and Advertisers a list of 5,000 picked names, with permanent addresses, is worth may times the price of "Who's Who in New York." 800 pages, handsomely and strongly bound in cloth, $5.00.

The Provident Life and Trust Company

Philadelphia

INSURANCE IN FORCE	$163,000,000
ASSETS	52,450,000
SURPLUS	6,650,000

The Responsibility

resting upon the officers and managers of a Life Insurance company is not different from that which is assumed by the trustees of individual estates. In the great majority of cases, the amount of the policy paid at the death of the insured represents a considerable part of his estate. In some cases it is all. The taking out of a policy is prompted by unselfish love and devotion. The payment of the annual premium represents quite often self-sacrifice and self-denial. The object to be secured, the protection and welfare of his family, is that which a man holds most dear.

The Aim

of the Provident Life and Trust Company is to conduct its business in accordance with this conception of the sacred character of the work and the solemn responsibilities imposed thereby. It best manifests its fidelity in keeping steadily before it as the true objective the maintenance of the highest security, so that a policy maturing thirty or forty years hence will be as certain of payment as one falling due to-morrow, and an endeavor by all proper means to lighten the burden of insurance by making the cost as small as is consistent with security.
